Welcome to the Studiospares 2015/16 Music Education Catalogue.

This latest catalogue covers all the best professional audio equipment in use in the education sector today. Gear for concerts and shows, podcasting, music and music tech classrooms, and recording studios - including microphones, speakers, mixers, and much more.

The Studiospares Philosophy

We are a family run company with over 30 years in the recording and live sound industry. All incoming orders are processed within minutes and ready for next day delivery. Our phones are answered by engineers who are all active in writing, performing and recording music. Their breadth of expertise covers all aspects of the industry and you can be assured they are not on commission.

Our main catalogue and website

The main Studiospares 2015 catalogue runs to 325 pages - covering around 8000 products. It is considered the industry Bible and is ideal for reference and comparison. Contact us for your FREE copy, or to help us update our records on your establishment. Our website has now been active for over 15 years, and is updated continually to provide the most up-to-date information on products and pricing.

In conclusion

In addition to having a large online presence, we also have a real store with demo facilities and immediate access to our huge stocks. We operate a scrupulously fair returns policy, and if you find a product cheaper elsewhere, we will endeavour to match prices from any UK stockist. We look forward to hearing from you.

Case Study

"I went to Studiospares looking for a PA system for my school that was mainly going to be used outside in the summer. I have very little knowledge of what a "good" system is, but the staff were really patient. They talked me through the options I had available to me with my budget, came and set up the system in its storage box and have shown me how to set it up and work it for when I need to use it."

Active or Passive?

Speakers can come with or without an amplifier built-in. This is usually stated as the speaker being active (with an amp) or passive (without an amp). Passive speakers are a great option if you already have an amplifier, whereas Active speakers are the perfect option for small studio setups. If you are not sure what you need – call our sales team on 020 8208 9930 for help.

Focusrite RedNet Range

Audio Interfaces/Signal Distribution

Studio quality sound meets digital audio networking...

As is typically the case, space is a premium and you cannot always have your music department situated in one room. Imagine being able to record students performing in a practice room, whilst mixing and recording from another room down the hallway, or even in another building – RedNet is the key to making this possible.

RedNet gives you the ability to transmit multiple channels of audio over a single Ethernet cable. This means you don't need to run hundreds of metres of thick copper wire. At Studiospares, we offer a bespoke service from design to installation, so you can record as soon as we are finished.

RedNet has been widely adopted in higher education, with leading establishments such as the University of West London finding it particularly appropriate for the diverse and extensive needs typically encountered.

It's easy to use, simply place the appropriate RedNet interfaces you need in any room in your facility that has a standard Ethernet port, plug the units into a Gigabit switch, plug that into the wall and you're done. These interfaces can be remotely-controlled from a computer allowing students to take advantage of a full range of studio equipment in the control room as well as utilising any sonic space in the building with an Ethernet port.

RedNet Case Study

Northbrook College

Northbrook College offers a range of Foundation and BA(Hons) Degrees revolved around Music Business, Composition for Film and Media, Music Performance and Music Production. With a new campus build in the pipeline, and the diversity of projects, flexibility was a must when deciding on methods of converting audio signals and sending them to various rooms in the building. The College have recently installed RedNet systems in three of their control rooms, alongside their Pro Tools HDX systems. With recent investments in Dante fitted live consoles, Northbrook can now offer range of possibilities with tracking into their control rooms from both studio and live performances.

MIDI Keyboard or Music Keyboard?

MIDI keyboards usually do not have built-in sounds, so they will require a computer to generate audio. They are a great option for computer labs. Music keyboards, such as the Yamaha PSR range, have instrument sounds built-in making them the perfect choice for classroom music lessons.

Studiospares Acoustitle Pro55

Wall Tiles

Brings a 55kg heavyweight foam to the audio industry...

- Size 500mm x 500mm.
- Polyester based Polyurethane foam
- Colour Grey
- 3 size options

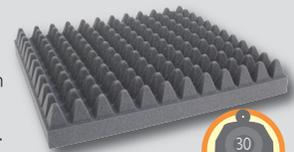

50mm Tile	465460	£7.50
75mm Tile	465470	£10.70
100mm Tile	465480	£13.90

Also available in the Studiospares Acoustic Tiles range:

Studiospares Acoustichack 30

Wall Tiles

Based on a genuine acoustic foam which out-performs any competitive product. Mid and high frequencies are obliterated whilst low frequencies are well contained particularly by the 100mm version. Problematic low frequencies require a high density foam like the Acoustichack 30 to have any significant effect. Size 500mm x 500mm. Colour grey.

50mm Tile	465490	£6.70
100mm Tile	465500	£9.80

Studiospares Panels

Bevelled Edge Acoustic Panels

A range of high performance fabric covered acoustic panels.

- Hardened edge and corners

300mm Grey	465380	£14.60
300mm Beige	465390	£14.60

Density

Density is a term often used to explain how well an acoustic tile can absorb sound energy. As a general rule of thumb, the denser the tile, the more absorptive it is.

Studiospares Antiverb

Acoustic Tiles

Designed to provide a degree of absorption where a room is "just a bit bright"

- Dimensions 500mm x 500mm x 25mm
- Density is 25-28kg/cubic metre

Glossary

Sound Treatment

Involves fitting acoustic tiles and panels, bass traps and diffusers etc, in order to improve the sound of a room to get a good clean recording of your performance. Relatively cost effective.

Soundproofing

Involves fitting false walls, floating floors, acoustic doors, etc, or better a complete rebuild, in order to stop sound escaping from a room and disturbing others.

Esmono Room Case Study

University Of Kent

Studiospares received a call from Coombs Construction of Canterbury to supply and fully install seven Esmono Sound Booths for the University of Kent at the historic dockyard at Medway.

After many meetings at their offices and on site, a schedule of works was put in place to meet with the University's requirements. Deliveries from the manufacturer had to be phased to overcome the logistical problems of storing the panels prior to erection.

The works were to include four small rooms for single usage and three larger double walled rooms for band and group practice. Studiospares were to plan out and erect the rooms whilst certified electrical contractors were to install and subsequently certify the electrical installation. The rooms were to have their own separate electrical supply to include wired sockets, lighting and RCD safety cut outs. Studiospares managed and fitted all the various multicore cables and interface boards for equipment signal inputs and outputs.

All units were fully installed in just under four weeks which was two days ahead of schedule.
