Hunter's Dilemma

A dilemma is a difficult situation that often has several different solutions, some better than others. Below are two examples of possible situations that hunters could encounter while in the field. Try to come up with three solutions for each, and write them on the lines beside each dilemma. Then circle the one that you think is the better solution. Use the following questions to guide you to a solution.

- What responsibility do you have to other hunters?
- What responsibility do you have to the wildlife resource?
- What responsibility do you have to the landowner?
- What impact do you think your decision could have on public opinion about hunting?
- Is there more than one solution? What could they be?

Dilemma #1

You're bowhunting when a nice buck walks by your tree stand, stops at about 15 yards, and quarters away. You make a great shot in the vital area of the rib cage. The deer takes only six more quick steps before dropping dead! You wait long enough to be sure he's finished. You climb down from your stand, approach the animal, and begin to admire the first deer you have ever taken with a bow. At that instant, another bowhunter runs toward you with a bloody arrow in his hand yelling, "That's my deer!"

What would you do?

Dilemma #2

This is your first time duck hunting, and you are with a friend that never comes home "empty-handed." As you walk toward a pond that your friend says is a hot spot, you notice several ducks swimming. You and your friend sneak up to the water's edge, but the birds don't fly. Your friend says "Let's get 'em," stands, and begins firing at the ducks still swimming on the pond.

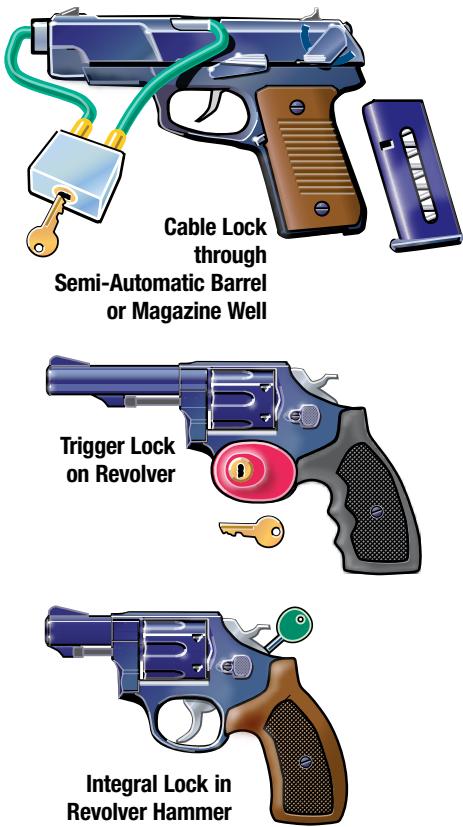

You would ...

 - a. waste meat and usable parts of the game harvested.
 - b. try for a quick, clean kill.
 - c. leave the land better than he or she found it.

3. Responsible hunters ____.
 - a. use land without asking permission from the landowner.
 - b. keep firearms out of sight when not hunting.
 - c. draw attention to themselves by wearing bloody or dirty hunting clothes when it's not necessary.

How You Can Help With Wildlife and Habitat Management

One rule you should follow if you want to help is don't feed the deer. Although many people think that feeding deer will help them survive the winter, this is not the case. Supplemental feeding can:

- Help spread diseases like Chronic Wasting Disease (CWD) and tuberculosis (TB).
- Cause disease in deer because they are not meant to eat corn or apples during the winter.
- Increase the deer's energy loss by luring them long distances away from cover and their normal feeding areas.
- Cause long-term habitat destruction.
- Increase the number of deer/vehicle collisions.
- Cause deer to rely on feeding locations, making them a private, not a public, resource.

Instead of feeding deer, you can help them survive by:

- Creating and maintaining a good quality deer habitat
- Improving natural food resources that will benefit all wildlife

Other Safety Considerations

• Self-Control and Target Identification

- Some hunters may become overly nervous or excited on a hunt, which can lead to careless behavior. They may fire at sounds, colors, movements, or unidentified shapes, or simply shoot too quickly. In the excitement after hitting their target, they may swing a loaded firearm toward their companions or run with the safety off toward a downed animal.
- Self-control is an important part of hunter safety. Only shoot when you know the target is legal game and that no people, domestic animals, buildings, or equipment are in the zone-of-fire—remember that bullets can pass through game and continue on for some distance with deadly force.
- Slow, careful shooting is not only safer, but it also produces a higher degree of success.

• Accuracy

- Shooting accurately is not only the key to successful hunting, but it's also a safety factor. Some incidents, often deadly ones, have occurred when stray bullets have hit people out of the shooter's sight. Be sure you have a proper backstop before you shoot.
- Accuracy is also important to make a clean kill. No real sportsman wants to wound game and cause needless suffering. You must learn how to hit the vital organs of the game you hunt. Knowing your game, equipment, and skill level will tell you when you're in position to make a clean kill.
