

Jabra delivers world-class headset solutions for the education market

Buyers in education have high standards. They need cutting-edge communications technology – and that has to be backed up with exemplary customer service from a partner that understands the nuances of the education sector.

Jabra understands what it means to deliver innovation and partnership – and we’ve been doing it for 150 years.

Jabra and our education know-how

Jabra has a legacy of innovation, having launched the first Bluetooth® headset, the first wireless headset, and a host of other new-to-market technologies. We are the only company in the sound solutions sector that offers consumer, professional and medical-grade quality.

We understand sound and the human ear better than anyone in our industry, and this knowledge touches everything we do.

We understand education customer needs

- Jabra products are listed on many of the largest government contracts, including GSA, NASPO, US Communities and others.
- Jabra’s range of corded and wireless headsets and speakerphones are designed to meet teacher, student and administrator needs for everything from online testing and in-classroom multimedia to campus-wide wireless mobility.
- Jabra headsets and speakerphones are compatible with all major devices, including Chromebook and iPad, as well as all other major IT platforms and phone systems.

We understand partnering

- Jabra’s legacy of innovation and industry firsts may have built our brand, but ask our customers and partners and they’ll tell you that “Jabra understands partnering.”
- We’re committed to supporting and collaborating with best-in-class strategic platforms, and a network of public sector channel partners.
- While our history of industry-leading products and pioneering work is central to our company’s vision, you’ll find that our philosophy of ethical collaboration, partnering and customer service is what truly sets us apart.
