"Comcast has long believed in doing business in a socially responsible manner, and now we are poised to do so on an even greater scale."

Following last year's successful combination of Comcast and NBCUniversal into one company, Comcast is now in the vanguard of technological and media innovation. We are focused more than ever on developing new, exciting opportunities to create and deliver the entertainment and information that our national and global consumers want.

Our combined company's unique platform for entertainment, information, and communications also drives us to create additional value in the neighborhoods we serve. We are exploring new ways to enhance our investments in the communities where we do business, while minimizing our impact on the environment.

Comcast has long believed in doing business in a socially responsible manner, and now we are poised to do so on an even greater scale. This year's CSR report provides a detailed picture of our sustainability initiatives.

In 2011, Comcast and NBCUniversal contributed more than $435 million in cash and in-kind services to charitable organizations throughout the country, including United Way, Boys & Girls Clubs, and City Year. To help close the digital divide, we launched our Internet Essentials program, which provides affordable broadband access to low-income families. We highlighted our commitment to acting environmentally responsible through a focused purchasing program that makes us the owner of the nation's tenth-largest hybrid vehicle fleet, and by offering more than 300 hours of programming on environmental topics as part of our Green is Universal initiative. In addition, our more than 50 on-air, online, and mobile platforms mobilized their audiences to actively engage in critical social discussions on topics ranging from improving education to protecting the environment to celebrating diversity.

I am excited about the progress we are making, though we also recognize the many opportunities we have to do more.

These challenges motivate us to find additional ways to demonstrate our ongoing commitment to our core values as a socially responsible company.

We aspire every day to earn the respect and trust of our stakeholders — customers, employees, shareholders, and the people in the communities we serve — and view them as partners in a collaborative effort to improve our corporate responsibility programs. Our employees, who live, work, and raise their families in the same communities as our customers, play an especially integral role in helping us move forward and make a difference every day.

Thanks for your interest in Comcast. I look forward to keeping you updated on our progress.

"At Comcast, we believe leadership is not just about telling others what to do, but doing it yourself."

From our beginning in Tupelo, Mississippi, nearly 50 years ago, Comcast has aspired to be a catalyst of change in the communities where our employees live and work. With the acquisition of NBCUniversal, our reach is now greater than ever.

With our company's growth, though, comes the responsibility to not just strengthen and enhance our business, but also to strengthen and enhance the value we bring to the communities we serve. Drawing upon the combined assets of our new company, we strive to achieve that every day by making connections not just in a customer's home, place of business, or on their mobile apps, but also at the neighborhood Boys & Girls Club, at health expos hosted by our local NBC and Telemundo stations, and through our employees' $30 million-plus in contributions to local United Way agencies.

In 2011, we launched an unprecedented effort to battle what we view as a critical civil rights issue of the twenty-first century: closing the digital divide and getting more low-income Americans connected to the Internet. The disparity in the broadband adoption gap keeps more Americans — the poorest Americans — from embracing opportunities for advancement. Our fight to close the gap has just begun, but already Comcast's Internet Essentials program has connected an estimated 160,000 low-income Americans to the power of the Internet, in most cases for the very first time.

Also in 2011, we celebrated the 10th anniversary of our company's annual day of giving, Comcast Cares Day. Thanks to this 10-year signature effort, we've had more than 360,000 Comcast volunteers donate more than 2.1 million hours of service. It is with great pride that we can point to statistics like this in terms of actual direct employee service to our communities.

At Comcast, we believe leadership is not just about telling others what to do, but doing it yourself, including taking steps to have our company reflect the diversity of American society. We seek programming that reflects the rich diversity of the communities we serve, and we strive to have our employee community and our vendor community reflect the growing diversity of our customer community.

A company is much more than the products and services it sells; it has the potential to dramatically change lives and improve communities. Just as Comcast and NBCUniversal have joined forces to drive the innovation that makes America a leader in the entertainment and information industries, we will continue to work together to forge new ways to have a long-term positive impact on the many communities we serve. It is our responsibility.

about this report

This is Comcast's fifth corporate social responsibility report, and the first to incorporate NBCUniversal. In preparing the 2011 Corporate Social Responsibility Report, we have identified what we believe are the most impactful issues to the business and our stakeholders, including the scope of our work on these issues.

Included in the 2011 Corporate Social Responsibility Report is our first annual Diversity & Inclusion Progress Report, highlighting how, together, we are providing more innovative programming and distribution opportunities; creating more opportunities for diverse suppliers and employees; and better serving the interests of many key segments of the viewing audience, including local viewers in the markets served by NBCUniversal's owned-and-operated NBC and Telemundo stations. We are providing more content that is relevant to the particular interests of Hispanics, African Americans, Asian Americans, children and families, and other key audience segments. We've also made major strides in narrowing the broadband adoption gap among low-income families.

Together, Comcast and NBCUniversal create and deliver programs that connect people and inspire positive and substantive change in the communities we serve. By working with a wide range of established, pro-social community partners — including national organizations with broad reach as well as deeply rooted, local organizations that understand the needs of their surrounding neighborhoods — we can deliver maximum impact in a variety of communities, while building trust and strengthening relationships in the towns and cities we serve nationwide.

Comcast and NBCUniversal are proud to be making the communities we serve stronger by empowering changemakers through technology, innovation, community service, and workforce volunteerism. Our efforts to close the broadband opportunity gap through our digital literacy programs are setting a new standard. Additionally, we're developing tomorrow's leaders through scholarship and mentoring programs.

closing the digital divide

CHARISSE R. LILLIE, VICE PRESIDENT, COMMUNITY INVESTMENT COMCAST CORPORATION

An attorney by training and a Philadelphian by choice, with years of community service experience in both the public and private sectors, Charisse R. Lillie, vice president of community investment for Comcast Corporation, brings a unique perspective and a strong conviction to community service to her day-to-day responsibilities. She is dedicated to closing the digital divide.

"Nearly one-third of all Americans are on the wrong side of the digital divide, many of them living near or below the poverty line," Charisse says. "They have limited computer literacy skills, if they have any at all. They don't have broadband access at home. Many don't have a home computer. Without these twenty-first century tools, getting a quality education, strengthening job skills, and accessing the health, educational, and financial information essential to improving the quality of their lives can be beyond their reach."

Comcast has been focused on bridging the digital divide since at least 2009, when the company partnered with One Economy on Comcast Digital Connectors, an intensive program for youth that develops their skills in using computers, applications, and the Internet. In 2010, Comcast joined Microsoft as a national cosponsor of the Boys & Girls Clubs of America's Club Tech program. In the summer of 2011, Comcast launched Internet Essentials, the largest and most comprehensive broadband adoption effort anywhere in America.

Internet Essentials is available throughout Comcast's service area, and provides low-cost broadband service for $9.95 a month; the option to purchase a full-service, Internet-ready computer for less than $150; and free digital literacy training — in print, online, and in-person. Internet Essentials is available to families with children eligible to receive a free or reduced price school lunch as part of the National School Lunch Program.

"Digital literacy awareness and training are a critical part of getting more Americans online," Charisse explains. "We took this information gap into account as we developed Internet Essentials, and included a substantial digital education component that gives Internet Essentials customers access to online, print, and in-person training opportunities."

In its first year of availability, Comcast has connected more than 91,000 families — an estimated 364,000 low-income Americans — to the power of the Internet in their homes. More than 11,500 computers were distributed, and more than 400 in-person training sessions were offered around the country.

"We've reviewed study after study, and this research consistently found that the barriers to broadband adoption involve limited digital literacy skills, a perceived lack of relevance of online content, and a real need for inexpensive, quality computers and Internet service," she says. "Internet Essentials was designed to address all of these hurdles, and all of Comcast's digital literacy programs are designed to overcome these concerns and demonstrate how using the Internet is important to everyone."

DIANE O'DELL, VICE PRESIDENT, COMMUNITY & DIVERSITY RELATIONS UNIVERSAL ORLANDO

Universal Orlando's employees are committed to making a difference in the local community by volunteering their time and expertise to empower people and support local organizations.

Ten years ago, Eccleston Elementary School was one of several Florida schools determined by the state to be failing its community and the young people who lived there. Tucked in a neighborhood four miles from the Universal Orlando Resort, company leaders stepped in, including Diane O'Dell, vice president of community & diversity relations for Universal Orlando.

"Working closely with the school, the teachers, the children, and the parents, we focus on taking a holistic approach as to what is needed. For the 2011 school year, we developed an incentive program to engage parents, recognize teaching excellence, and reward students who make reading gains throughout the year," Diane explains.

Universal Orlando employees delivered assistance to help elevate the school's performance by combining funding, a tutoring program, and more than 20 volunteers who visit Eccleston's classrooms two mornings a week to help the young students learn to read.

"You can see it in their eyes when they have that breakthrough moment. You can see their confidence growing," Diane says. She speaks from experience — she saw that gleam in the eyes of a third-grade girl, Courtney, whom she tutored.

In 2012, on Comcast Cares Day, nearly 250 volunteers from Universal Orlando, the Golf Channel, and Comcast worked alongside Eccleston Elementary staff, students, and their parents to beautify the campus. The volunteers painted basketball courts and murals, landscaped the grounds, and built a butterfly garden.

"I feel very fortunate to work for a company that fosters not just a culture and spirit of giving, but also has the resources to give. So many people are willing to lend their expertise, whether in marketing, human resources, purchasing or something else," Diane says. "Our corporate involvement means leveraging everything we have to offer."

In the decade since the Eccleston partnership began, the elementary school has seen its state grading soar to an A, but also fall again, reflecting the challenges that sometimes come with a community that lacks a fixed residential base. But the relationship between Universal Orlando and Eccleston remains solid. "For us, partnership isn't a one-time event. It's about really developing that partnership over the years, and being in it for the long haul," Diane says. "What's important for our employees is to stick with the students and stick with the school."

digital literacy

The Internet is a transformative technology that has the potential to provide equal access to information for everyone. Efforts to bridge the digital divide include recognition that learning digital literacy skills are as critical to success as traditional literacy and math skills. We invest substantially in digital literacy and broadband adoption programs across the country through three signature programs, as well as through Comcast Foundation funding of many more local efforts.

Comcast Digital Connectors

In 2009, Comcast partnered with One Economy to launch the Comcast Digital Connectors program. At each Comcast Digital Connectors site, youth between the ages of 14 and 21, primarily from diverse, low-income backgrounds, spend their after-school hours or summers learning how to network computer labs, connect wireless access points, design computer training modules, and create social media projects. They also volunteer their time to expand digital literacy in their communities. Youth who successfully graduate from the program earn Cisco IT Essentials certification and a complimentary netbook computer.

In 2011, the program was offered through 58 community-based partners nationwide, training 76 groups of Comcast Digital Connectors. At the end of the 2011-2012 school year, more than 2,000 youth had participated in the program and provided 100,000 hours of community service by sharing their technology skills in their communities.

Club Tech — Boys & Girls Clubs of America

In partnership with Boys & Girls Clubs of America and in collaboration with Microsoft, Comcast provided nearly $1 million in Foundation funding to support Club Tech at more than 50 Clubs serving 39,000 youth in 2011. The Club Tech curriculum teaches technical skills and integrates technology into the core program, while emphasizing the safe and ethical use of technology and exploring high-tech career options. Youth learn basic hardware, software, and networking skills, then move to more advanced skills, including graphic design, digital photography, music, film-making, and robotics.

For youth with more advanced digital literacy skills, Comcast partnered with 10 local Boys & Girls Clubs to offer the Comcast Digital Connectors program.

Internet Essentials

Internet Essentials, our comprehensive broadband adoption effort, addresses three primary barriers to technology adoption: a lack of understanding of how the Internet is relevant and useful, the cost of a home computer, and the cost of Internet service. Internet Essentials is available to families served by more than 4,000 school districts in 39 states and Washington, D.C.

We have publicized the program across more than 4,000 school districts — comprising more than 30,000 schools, which serve approximately 3.5 million National School Lunch Program families. We partnered with more than 3,000 governors; mayors; local, state, and federal legislators; and community-based organizations to promote Internet Essentials and engage eligible families in their communities. We also empowered nearly 100,000 Comcast employees to directly engage eligible families.

community service

Reaching out to help our neighbors is a culture that Comcast and NBCUniversal have long shared. While funding is an important part of our community investment efforts, every day our employees work in partnership with community or local organizations to make a difference in the communities we serve.

Comcast Cares Day

As the largest single-day corporate volunteer effort in the country, Comcast Cares Day brings together our employees, their families, and friends to volunteer in their local communities on a range of betterment projects including revitalizing neglected neighborhood parks, beautifying schools, stocking community food banks, and installing computer labs at community centers.

During the 10th Comcast Cares Day, nearly 70,000 volunteers contributed more than 417,000 hours of service at 659 sites in 39 states and Washington, D.C.

▲ Since 2001, more than 360,000 volunteers have contributed over 2.1 million hours of service on Comcast Cares Day, and the Comcast Foundation has contributed more than $10.5 million to Comcast Cares Day partner organizations.

Hiring Our Heroes

Between March 2011 and March 2012, more than 150 Hiring Our Heroes job fairs were conducted via a partnership with NBCUniversal and the U.S. Chamber of Commerce. These job fairs, along with NBC News support, connected more than 125,000 veterans and military spouses with 6,000 different employers in 48 states and Washington, D.C. In this time frame, more than 9,500 veterans and military spouses found jobs as a result of this program.

As part of the company's commitment to Hiring Our Heroes, we have committed to hire 1,000 veterans by the end of 2014 across Comcast and NBCUniversal businesses.

TODAY Toy Drive

TODAY held its 18th Annual Holiday Toy and Gift Drive in 2011 for needy families in the United States. By mobilizing partner contributions, we collected and distributed more than $35 million in toy donations. The items are often given directly to families who cannot afford to buy presents, so that children can open a gift given to them by a loved one, not by a charity. Donated items reach millions of children in all 50 states, through local non-profit organizations.

Health Expos

In local communities across the country, NBCUniversal and Telemundo stations provide important health information and services throughout the year. In 2011, NBC 4 in Washington, D.C. presented its 18th annual NBC 4 Health and Fitness Expo in partnership with more than 160 local health and non-profit organizations. More than 85,000 people received nearly $1 million in medical care at no cost, including tests and screenings for blood pressure, cholesterol, diabetes, glaucoma, glucose, HIV/AIDS, hearing, as well as dental exams. Local businesses also offered attendees financial counseling and educational materials.

In other markets, health information and services were also offered in local communities. NBC Connecticut provided free health services at the 6th annual NBC Connecticut Health & Wellness Festival for 22,000 people. In Miami, NBC 6 and Telemundo 51 hosted their 7th Annual Health & Fitness Expo, providing almost 30,000 attendees with free and reduced-cost health tests.

Japan Earthquake & Tsunami Assistance

Comcast and NBCUniversal offered immediate assistance to those seeking information in the aftermath of the devastating events of March 11, 2011. Comcast provided free international calling to Japan for a month, both for its XFINITY Voice and Business Class Voice customers. More than 90,000 free calls were made during this time frame.

International Media Distribution (IMD), an NBCUniversal company that provides multicultural in-language programming in the United States, worked with affiliates to open the TV JAPAN signal so that families in the United States could connect to news and information from Japan.

In addition, members of NBCUniversal's Asian Pacific Americans employee affinity group, through the "Dine Out for Japan Relief" effort, raised nearly $125,000 to support the tsunami recovery and relief efforts of UNICEF and the Red Cross.

United Way

Comcast joined United Way's National Corporate Leadership program in 2003. Comcast is ranked nationally as a United Way Top 50 Corporate Campaign.

Comcast raised $6.7 million for local United Way chapters in 2011 — including almost $5.1 million from employee pledges, combined with Comcast Foundation matching grants of $1.6 million. Comcast has raised $43.5 million for local United Way chapters since 2001.

tomorrow's leaders

Since today's teenagers will become tomorrow's teachers, doctors, journalists, business leaders, technologists, community leaders, and parents, we want to help them learn the skills they'll need to achieve their career and personal goals.

City Year

In 2001, Comcast began working with City Year, an education-focused non-profit organization that brings together young volunteers for one year of full-time service dedicated to keeping public school students in school and on track to graduation. Ten years later, Comcast and NBCUniversal support individual City Year teams in eight markets: Boston, Chicago, Detroit, Denver, Los Angeles, Miami, Philadelphia, and Washington, D.C.

Each team of City Year corps members supports students by focusing on attendance, behavior, and course performance through in-class tutoring, mentoring, and after-school programs. In 2011, 85% of all students in the third, fourth, and fifth grades tutored by City Year improved their literacy scores.

To date, Comcast and NBCUniversal have invested more than $75 million in financial and in-kind support to City Year.

Big Brothers Big Sisters Beyond School Walls Program

In 2008, Comcast partnered with Big Brothers Big Sisters of Southeastern Pennsylvania to introduce the mentoring program Beyond School Walls, bringing fourth-grade "Littles" from Fairhill Elementary School to Comcast headquarters in Philadelphia to spend time with their "Bigs" at work. Based on the incredible impact of the Beyond School Walls program in Philadelphia — on both the "Littles" and "Bigs" — Comcast expanded the program to additional cities. Since the partnership's founding, Comcast has invested more than $30 million in cash and in-kind support.

Leaders & Achievers Scholarships

Now in its 12th year, the Comcast Leaders & Achievers Scholarship Program recognizes high school seniors for their community service, academic achievement, and leadership skills. Students, nominated by their high school principals, are awarded one-time scholarships of $1,000. Since 2001, we've awarded more than $15 million in scholarships.

▲ For the 2011-12 program, Comcast awarded almost $1.9 million to nearly 1,900 students — more than 43% from diverse backgrounds.

charitable giving

In 2011, Comcast and NBCUniversal, along with our foundations, provided more than $435 million in cash and in-kind contributions to local, regional, and national organizations.

The Comcast Foundation

The Comcast Foundation has three community investment priorities — promoting community service, expanding digital literacy, and building tomorrow's leaders. Since its inception in 1999, the Comcast Foundation has donated more than $108 million to organizations in the communities Comcast serves nationwide.

In 2011, the Comcast Foundation provided $15.5 million in grants to more than 920 non-profit organizations and other charitable partners across the country.

The NBCUniversal Foundations

In 2011, across NBCUniversal, the foundations provided close to $2.5 million to nearly 160 non-profit organizations and other charitable partners nationwide.

making media matter

Comcast and NBCUniversal have many assets, but none more powerful than our ability to connect to hundreds of millions of people through our media outlets. The company has a powerful portfolio to educate and empower communities and people, and to contribute to both the local and national dialogue on important social issues. Our strength lies in our ability to mobilize film, documentary, TV, news, and social media, among others, to engage the public, encourage new forms of civic participation, and promote future-forward activation around social causes.

Comcast and NBCUniversal focused on a wide range of important political, social, and economic issues in 2011, creating content for all platforms and connecting a diverse spectrum of people, empowering them to take action.

ALFREDO RICHARD, SENIOR VICE PRESIDENT, COMMUNICATIONS AND TALENT STRATEGY TELEMUNDO MEDIA

"Empowering audiences is central to our mission and community. Community is at the heart of who we are," says Alfredo Richard, senior vice president of communications and talent strategy for Telemundo Media, the leading producer of Spanish-language primetime content for U.S. Hispanics. A native of Chile who immigrated to the United States, Alfredo is especially attuned to the challenges facing U.S. Hispanics today. Through actively participating in creating awareness of the U.S. Census, voter registration, and education, Alfredo is leading Telemundo Media's cross-platform service efforts to empower and mobilize viewers to take control of their futures.

"Working hard to make it in this country helped me understand what people need to do in order to succeed," he says. "And success starts in school. We need to help more of our youth finish high school to lay the foundation for future achievement."

According to the U.S. Census Bureau, 21% of U.S. Hispanics between the ages of 18 and 24 have not completed high school or are not enrolled in school, a significantly higher percentage than the rest of the population. To help address this critical issue head-on, Telemundo launched its multiplatform campaign El Poder de Saber to promote the educational advancement of young Latinos, with an emphasis on secondary education and preventing high school dropouts. This effort incorporates the unique challenges Hispanic youth face as identified in 2009 research from the Pew Hispanic Center, the National Women's Law Center, and the Mexican American Legal Defense and Educational Fund, and is supported by partner organizations such as the National Council of La Raza and the Congressional Hispanic Caucus Institute.

"Hispanic youth face many of the same challenges as other kids, but they also face additional, culturally specific pressures that can drive them to drop out of school — lack of parental engagement in their education, language barriers, and family economics. Telemundo has created public service announcements and online resources on each of these key topics, speaking to our audience in a direct and culturally relevant way, to motivate youth to stay in school," says Alfredo.

Many U.S. Hispanic families don't have a good understanding of today's school environment, and some parents are disengaged due to the language barrier they face with teachers and counselors. Telemundo stresses the importance of parents taking Telemundo PSAs encourage Hispanic youth to finish school.

Rashel Diaz: "You're all grown up and you probably want to buy your own things."

Omar Gerrenos: "Or maybe you need to help your family cover household expenses. But you should remember to make studying your number one priority."

Rashel: "Chances of finding a job are doubled with a high school diploma and tripled if you graduate from college."

Omar: "Don't risk your future for a few dollars today."

Rashel: "Together, with education, we'll have the power..."

Rashel and Omar together: "the power of knowing."

an active role in their children's education by participating in school activities and talking directly with their teachers.

While many new immigrants face a strong language barrier, even some second- and third-generation U.S. Hispanic youth find that class work requires a more demanding level of English than they possess. Telemundo PSAs remind youth that they need to develop strong English skills to be successful, and they are encouraged to ask teachers for help.

Economics can drive students to drop out of high school, as they seek employment to help their families pay the bills. Telemundo helps youth and their families understand the benefits that earning a high school diploma has for long-term employment and earnings potential.

"In the tradition of Comcast and NBCUniversal, Telemundo recognizes the importance of community service, in particular the education of our youth, and we know our audience cares about education as well. They don't always have the information they need to make decisions for the long term, so we help by mobilizing our airwaves to offer solutions and create conversations about these issues," says Alfredo. "We need to have a way to create positive action in our communities."

MAGGIE MCLEAN SUNIEWICK, VICE PRESIDENT, VIDEO SERVICES COMCAST CABLE

Comcast is known first and foremost as a cable company, but video programming at Comcast's XFINITY TV goes well beyond the regularly scheduled programming on your cable guide. Vice President of Video Services for Comcast Cable Maggie McLean Suniewick is on the front lines of content management across the company's viewing platforms.

While much of this content is designed to entertain, Maggie and her team also work with a variety of programming partners and nationally renowned subject-matter experts to bring XFINITY TV customers original offerings aimed at informing and inspiring viewers.

"Throughout the year, we spend a great deal of time creating compelling special features that are both educational and entertaining. We focus on topics in line with historical and current events, as well as annual commemorations," Maggie explains. In 2011, more than 2,000 video assets were featured in cross-platform service special features.

Themed programming led the cross-platform, special features programming inventory. Each February, Comcast celebrates African American culture with programming on XFINITY TV, including award-winning biographies, documentaries, sports, music, movies, and TV shows. After seeing viewership dramatically grow for this type of content, XFINITY TV worked to create a year-round collection for African American content — called Black Cinema on XFINITY On Demand.

To mark the 50th anniversary of John F. Kennedy's presidency, Comcast partnered with the John F. Kennedy Presidential Library and Museum to give customers across the country the opportunity to experience the JFK Library virtually, providing one of the largest public offerings of JFK content outside of the library in Boston. The month-long content exhibition included famous speeches — including President Kennedy's 1961 inaugural address — presidential debates, newsreels, campaign commercials, documentaries, and films.

Comcast also partnered with the USC Shoah Foundation Institute, established by Steven Spielberg, to feature 10 documentary films as well as short clips of Holocaust survivor testimonies and background information on the Shoah Foundation Institute and its work. The Days of Remembrance series was available across XFINITY On Demand, XfinityTV.com, and the XFINITY TV app.

Africa First

Focus Features created the Africa First initiative in 2008 to develop emerging filmmakers of African nationality and residence through financial support, mentoring, and workshops on international film distribution and studio financing. Short films created by the Africa First program winners have since been showcased at leading film festivals around the world, including Sundance and the Berlin Film Festival.

In 2011, for a fourth consecutive year, five filmmakers were awarded $10,000 each to be used for preproduction, production, and/or postproduction on their narrative short films. These filmmakers were mentored by members of the Africa First Advisory Board (an international panel of experts on African film), who aim to help them grow as filmmakers and reach an international audience.

This year's emerging African filmmakers represented Burkina Faso, Ethiopia, Ghana, Namibia, and South Africa.

Education Nation

NBC News launched Education Nation in September 2010 to create a thoughtful, well-informed dialogue with policymakers, thought-leaders, educators, and the public in pursuit of the shared goal of providing every American with an opportunity to achieve the best education in the world. In September 2011, NBC News hosted its second annual Education Nation summit, addressing the developments, challenges, and progress of the past year, and identifying and exploring new opportunities in education. NBC News remains committed to engaging policymakers and the public through persistent coverage on the state of education, and hopes to help Americans make decisions about how best to improve our education system in both the near and long terms.

USA Network's Characters Unite

USA Network created Characters Unite to increase awareness of social injustices and cultural divides; encourage positive dialogue; and inspire and support individual and community action to promote civil and human rights. Through original on-air programming and PSAs, digital content, community outreach, and special events, the campaign reflects the simple premise of USA's brand tagline, "Characters Welcome," and is supported by dozens of leading non-profit organizations.

As part of the initiative, USA partnered with the non-profit The Moth and our multichannel video programming distributors (MVPDs) to create the Characters Unite National Storytelling Tour to use the power of storytelling to help foster greater understanding, respect, and acceptance. The tour — entitled A More Perfect Union: Stories of Prejudice and Power — includes a "mainstage" show featuring a combination of prominent celebrities, cultural figures, and community leaders each sharing a true, 10-minute story of overcoming bigotry or discrimination, and how the experience empowered them and inspired change. In addition, at each tour stop, USA Network, The Moth, and a local MVPD host a high school program in which 10 students, following a week of after-school workshops, tell their own stories of facing bullying, hate, and discrimination, at an all-school assembly. In 2011, the tour made stops in Atlanta, Chicago, Denver, Seattle, St. Louis, and Washington, D.C.

Green is Universal

NBCUniversal's Green is Universal initiative is focused on bringing an environmental perspective to everything we do — informing and entertaining our audiences while driving more sustainable practices into our own operations.

In 2011, NBCUniversal delivered more than 300 hours of programming across all its brands to inform and educate audiences about environmental topics. During April's Earth Week and November's Green Week, this environmentally focused content reached millions of consumers through our more than 50 on-air, online, and mobile platforms, including iconic programs, like TODAY, NBC Nightly News with Brian Williams, NBC Sports, and through newer brands like Oxygen and iVillage.

- NBC Nightly News with Brian Williams covered the Gulf Coast oil spill disaster to examine its lingering impact on the region and its residents
- CNBC provided programming that included a slate of documentaries — Beyond the Barrel, Liquid Assets, and Trash Inc. — as well as the ongoing series The Carbon Challenge
- Bravo's Top Chef offered vignettes featuring ecotips on going green in the kitchen
- Sprout produced a special, week-long green edition of The Sunny Side Up Show to help children learn about ways to reduce, reuse, and recycle

▲ In 2011, to extend our environmental programming, Green is Universal engaged consumers via a digital event-based campaign and drove 15,000 posts and tweets on topics including the Art of ReUse and Mugs Save Trees. We also hosted Earth Week community projects in more than 15 locations, and 70,000 consumers viewed our Experience Store window about the "Journey of a Paper Cup."

Thirty seconds of television airtime can be impactful and defining. That time is also expensive and out of reach for many non-profit organizations. In 2011, we donated more than $240 million of Public Service Announcement airtime, highlighting health, promoting diversity, encouraging volunteerism, and mobilizing communities.

Fight with Style

The Style Network aims to empower women to be actively engaged in the issues that matter most to them. Through multiple advocacy platforms, Fight with Style helps to support underprivileged women, gives Style viewers and online users tools and knowledge to help prevent skin cancer, and supports families in the fight against childhood obesity.

As the exclusive media partner of Dress for Success Worldwide, an organization dedicated to helping underprivileged women reenter the workforce, Style supports this national organization through the production of videos and public service announcements, fundraising, and promotions with clothiers and jewelers.

The More You Know

For more than two decades, NBCUniversal's Emmy Award-winning, multiplatform campaign The More You Know has been raising awareness about important social issues, and motivating viewers to take action. Featuring NBCUniversal's brightest stars, including Brian Williams, Alec Baldwin, Giuliana Rancic, Padma Lakshmi, and Jencarlos Canela, The More You Know relies on the guidance of a national advisory board consisting of government, community, and education leaders.

City Year

In support of our national partnership, Comcast assisted City Year's recruitment efforts by airing more than $3 million worth of public service announcements to build awareness of the organization among young adults. Comcast's commitment of these resources helped generate more than 10,000 applications for the 2,000 positions City Year needed to fill; as a result, 100,000 students at 187 high-need schools in 23 cities across the country were helped.

In 2011, Boys & Girls Clubs of America launched its Faces of the Future campaign to raise awareness about the importance of digital literacy. Comcast featured the campaign as the lead story on Comcast.net and social media sites, driving almost 80% of the campaign traffic. Due to Comcast's support of this campaign, Boys & Girls Clubs of America's Facebook fans nearly doubled in the first 10 days of the two-week campaign, adding more fans in this 10-day period than the organization had engaged in the prior three years.

Text for Trees

Each December, NBCUniversal gives a gift to the environment through the Text for Trees program. Through the simple action of texting or tweeting, millions of consumers helped Green is Universal plant more than 2 million trees across the United States. Launched in December of 2009 at the Rockefeller Center holiday tree lighting ceremony, nearly 250,000 texts were sent by consumers, each resulting in one tree being planted. The program has broadened to online, email, and social media outreach tactics on Facebook and Twitter, resulting in more than 1 million trees having been planted in each of the last two years.

This program helps rebuild our nation's depleted forests — forests that might have been damaged by extreme weather or fires. Trees are planted around the country by the Arbor Day Foundation, Text for Trees' non-profit partner.

Sprout's Kindness Counts

In August 2011, preschool television channel Sprout created a multiplatform, pro-social initiative called Kindness Counts, designed to support the development of empathy, sharing, and helping in preschoolers by promoting small acts of kindness that make big differences.

The long-term campaign, created in consultation with Dr. Nancy Eisenberg, Ph.D., a leading theorist in the field of empathy and altruism, includes a series of PSAs aimed at families watching Sprout together, as well as digital and social media components focused on parents and caregivers of preschoolers. Children are encouraged to face situations with kindness and then tell their parents or caregivers about what they did so their efforts can be shared on sproutonline.com.

The ultimate goal is to log one million acts of kindness from families all across the country on sproutonline.com/KindnessCounts. Any small act of kindness performed by a child can be submitted, from throwing away a piece of litter to making a new friend.

Diversity & Inclusion Progress Report

In 2011, Comcast and NBCUniversal established a goal to develop the most successful model of diversity and inclusion in the communications and entertainment industries. We practice and believe in diversity as both a social value and a business philosophy. We define diversity broadly — not just as embracing differences in race, gender, culture, color, religion, sexual orientation, veteran status, age, or ability — but also embracing a business culture that respects and includes different thoughts, choices, philosophies, and experiences.

"We will respect and reflect the customers, communities, and cultures we serve."

CRAIG ROBINSON, EXECUTIVE VICE PRESIDENT, CHIEF DIVERSITY OFFICER NBCUNIVERSAL

The only child of a Chinese American mother and an African American father, Craig grew up with a strong perspective about diversity in America. His 30 years in television management have also played a vital role in developing his philosophy about diversity and inclusion in our everyday business practices. His knowledge and passion on the topics have earned him the respect of his colleagues in the industry, and his appointment as Chief Diversity Officer at NBCUniversal was a natural progression in his career.

In this role, Craig is poised to help drive significant and tangible changes that will position NBCUniversal as a leader in diversity and inclusion practices in the entertainment industry.

Raised in Los Angeles in the early 1960s, Craig grew up on a block dense with biracial couples, gay couples, and single-parent households — an unusual mix for the era. His family encountered discrimination firsthand in their search for housing, which led them to the accepting neighborhood of Echo Park.

Craig was also strongly aware of the struggles for equality and fairness from his father's experience with the state office of Fair Employment Practices, where he investigated charges of discrimination in housing and employment, and from his mother, who spent much of her career working with the Aid to Families with Dependent Children program.

"I grew up discussing race and social justice every night at the dinner table," Craig says, "so I've given much thought to these issues both personally and professionally my entire life."

After earning a degree in political science, Craig went to work for a local Los Angeles TV station in an administrative support role. Over 14 years, "with hard work, mentors, and some luck, I worked my way up to sales management," he says.

In the late 1980s, a minority advancement program helped propel him to his first executive position. Sixteen years ago, he moved to NBC where he eventually rose to President and General Manager of KNBC in Los Angeles.

"I'm a beneficiary of diversity programs, and I embrace these initiatives," he says, "but now I want to emphasize the inclusion aspect, because that's what really generates cultural change. Recently, I heard someone describe diversity as being invited to the party; inclusion means being asked to dance."

With his firm belief that diversity and inclusion must continue to be priorities, Craig works with NBCUniversal businesses to identify barriers to inclusion and to help remove them. He also emphasizes both the necessity and opportunity in aligning diversity and inclusion with the company's business goals.

"I'm one of only a handful of Asian Americans, African Americans, and gay Americans to have had the privilege to run a broadcast operation, and I know the business challenges we face. We're an entertainment and information business, and we need multiple points of view," he says.

"It's clear — if we're not diverse, our content won't be compelling and right for the broad and changing audiences we serve. I can't think of a more exciting time or company to serve in this role."

MARIA G. ARIAS, EXECUTIVE DIRECTOR, DIVERSITY & INCLUSION COMCAST CORPORATION

One of six children, Maria immigrated to the United States from Mexico at the age of four, and she and her family spoke mostly Spanish in her Chicago neighborhood home. Throughout her formal education, Maria faced challenges related to her ethnicity and gender.

"I felt different and out of place. I was penalized with detention for speaking Spanish with my Hispanic friends," Maria recalls. "As I progressed through school, I was lucky because many of my professors saw a spark in me. I was driven and they saw that. They looked beyond my gender and race, and challenged me to continue to pursue my goals and to be my authentic self. What I learned then, and know now, is that hard work, results, and relationships trump life's challenges."

As Maria joined the workforce and became a member of organizations such as Women in Cable Telecommunications and the Hispanic Chamber of Commerce, she sharpened her interests in mentoring, financial planning, literacy, voting rights, and immigrant rights.

"I've always found it important to value the diverse perspectives and the different schools of thought that happen in the workplace and within the communities where we live and work," says Maria. "These differences happen naturally because of diverse backgrounds, experiences, preferences, and beliefs. And, it's not just valuing, but sincerely embracing these differences that determines our company's level of competitiveness within a fast-paced, global marketplace."

This empowered perspective, combined with an impressive career in law, government affairs, cable operations, and community service positioned Maria well when Comcast began looking for someone to lead Diversity & Inclusion for the company.

Maria joined the Diversity & Inclusion team in April of 2011, moving from Colorado Springs to Philadelphia. Since relocating, she's researched and defined extensive benchmarks for the company's national footprint. She works daily with leaders across the company to develop and implement strategies to more directly infuse diversity and inclusion into everyday business. She also helped spearhead the development of affinity groups for a wide range of diverse employees, creating an opportunity for mentorship and authentic leadership development.

"I'm proud Comcast has a more unified plan for diversity and inclusion today, and I'm eager to further develop this capability for the future," she says. "I want our team and our company to help inspire opportunities and ideas. With an aggregation of perspectives, skills, and capabilities, we can be more innovative, capture new multicultural markets, and offer amazing products, services, and programming to our customers."

"What I learned then, and know now, is that hard work, results, and relationships trump life's challenges."

With David L. Cohen serving as the chair, the JDC is comprised of diverse leaders in business, politics, and civil rights. Building Our Pipeline and Our Future

The recruitment, development, promotion, and retention of diverse talent are top priorities for Comcast and NBCUniversal. The company's strategy to increase diversity in management is rooted in leadership development and pipeline programs.

The company uses proven methods — including formal mentoring and executive leadership programs — to identify, hire, promote, and retain high-potential diverse candidates. Partnerships with external organizations that share our mission, such as Women in Cable Telecommunications (WICT) and the National Association for Multi-Ethnicity in Communications (NAMIC), augment our internal leadership development and pipeline programs. Comcast and NBCUniversal offer more than 80 leadership development, pipeline, and internship programs (both internal and external).

Some examples of diversity leadership programs are:

Executive Leadership Career Advancement Program (ELCAP)

ELCAP is an internal program intended to accelerate career growth for and increase retention of a diverse pipeline of leadership talent at Comcast. ELCAP's goals are to increase diversity in senior leadership ranks by accelerating promotional readiness for participants; to provide targeted exposure to key decision-makers; and to reduce turnover by providing challenging assignments and career growth for high-potential employees. The program was introduced in 2011.

NBC News Leadership Program

The NBC News Leadership Program targets diverse, mid-career news journalists and producers with executive producer potential. This 16-month mentoring and development program includes a curriculum tailored to prepare participants for executive producer roles, as well as mentorship by a news executive.

Encouraging Subcontractor Diversity (Tier II)

Comcast and NBCUniversal's Supplier Diversity Program offers every business — regardless of its ownership — an opportunity to compete for business within our company. We believe that encouraging prime (Tier I) vendors to subcontract with diverse second-tier (Tier II) vendors can expand our business with diverse vendors while reducing barriers to entry for those businesses. To that end, we have taken steps to further our goal of increasing the number of prime (or Tier I) suppliers who provide second-tier (Tier II) data by encouraging Tier I vendors to work with the company to help expand the Supplier Diversity Program through the successful creation of Tier II opportunities for diverse businesses.

Comcast's standard Request for Proposal (RFP) language encourages Tier II diversity, and Comcast considers Tier II diversity among its criteria for purchasing decisions. NBCUniversal has added Tier II reporting to all new contracts and requests for proposals. This reporting requirement will also be added to older contracts after they expire and are renegotiated.

Comcast entered into an agreement with a third-party vendor for a centralized vendor management system. These expanded resources enable a new and more robust Web-based database and registration site for diverse suppliers interested in doing business with Comcast; a consolidated list of diversity-owned suppliers across multiple industries and geographic locations; and additional software, tools, and outsourced professional service resources to assist in supplier diversity efforts for both Tier I and Tier II spending. The expanded operational resources will include an online portal through which prime contractors can upload information regarding Tier II vendors on a voluntary basis.

▲ With diverse suppliers in key business areas — including installation contractors, fleet, marketing, furniture, office supplies, and information technology — Comcast and NBCUniversal currently have nearly 17,000 diverse businesses registered across our vendor-intake websites.

Banking Partnerships

Comcast's history of involvement with the minority-owned banking community spans more than 20 years and continued throughout 2011. NBCUniversal participates in Comcast's minority-owned banking initiatives as well. We value our relationships with minority-owned banks and investment firms that offer differentiated and tailored solutions designed to address the company's needs, including lending through credit facilities, brokerage services for stock repurchases, bond underwriting, and commercial paper issuance, as well as traditional banking and deposit arrangements.

Legal Resources

In 2010, Comcast became a founding member of the Inclusion Initiative, a collaborative effort of several companies designed to increase the utilization of diverse law firms. Comcast and NBCUniversal have increased spending with diverse law firms, and in 2011 the combined company spent more than $1.6 million with them. In addition, Comcast and NBCUniversal's legal teams are focused on expanding the amount of business done with minority and female lawyers at majority-owned firms.

Advertising Spend

Together, Comcast and NBCUniversal increased spending on advertising with minority-owned media in 2011 by $7 million, primarily with African American-owned media. independent networks

Comcast is committed to delivering programming that reflects the diverse interests of our customers across all of our platforms.

Minority-Owned/Operated Independent Networks

After a thorough evaluation of more than 100 proposals, Comcast unveiled plans to distribute four new minority-owned and/or operated independent networks on Comcast Cable systems, launching between May 2012 and January 2014. These new networks — Aspire, BabyFirst Americas, El Rey, and REVOLT — are the first of 10 new, independent channels that Comcast will launch over the next eight years to significantly expand our ethnic and independent programming.

Aspire

Spearheaded by entrepreneur and NBA Hall of Famer Earvin "Magic" Johnson, in partnership with GMC TV, Aspire is dedicated to delivering enlightening, entertaining, and positive programming to African American families, including movies, documentaries, short films, music, comedy, visual and performing arts, and faith and inspirational programs. Aspire will celebrate the successes, achievements, and accomplishments of the African American community and create new opportunities for the next generation of African American visionaries.

REVOLT

Proposed by superstar and entrepreneur Sean "Diddy" Combs and MTV veteran Andy Schuon, this network is designed to present programming inspired by music and pop culture, including music videos, live performances, music news, and interviews, and will incorporate social media interaction for music artists and fans.

BabyFirst Americas

Proposed by Spanish language television veteran Constantino "Said" Schwarz, this network is designed for infants, very young children, and their parents, and emphasizes the importance of early development of verbal, math, and motor skills.

El Rey

Proposed by legendary Hollywood director Robert Rodriguez and FactoryMade Ventures executives John Fogelman and Cristina Patwa, this network is designed to be an action-packed, general entertainment network in English for Latino and general audiences that includes a mix of reality, scripted, and animated series, movies, documentaries, news, music, comedy, and sports programming. The El Rey network will include programming that features Hispanic producers, celebrities, and public figures.

With Comcast and NBCUniversal, diversity goes far beyond the workplace. By partnering with organizations focused on diversity as intensively as we are, we can help shape the future of our industry and society as a whole.

National Urban League

Comcast began a long-term partnership with the National Urban League in 2007. Urban League chapters support our digital literacy efforts and partner with us on Comcast Cares Day. Through both cash and in-kind support of Urban League initiatives, including its Annual Conference and the State of Black America Press Conference, both Comcast and NBCUniversal aspire to increase awareness of and further develop the National Urban League's educational programs to help address the needs of the African American community.

In 2011, Comcast provided the National Urban League with more than $12 million in airtime for the organization's "I Am Empowered" campaign.

National Council of La Raza

The company has been working in partnership with the National Council of La Raza (NCLR) since 2006, improving lives in Hispanic communities through its 300 local affiliates, which provide direct services, resources, and assistance. NCLR affiliates support our digital literacy efforts and benefit from Comcast Cares Day volunteer efforts. In 2011, Comcast and NBCUniversal provided more than $3 million in airtime to support NCLR priorities, including the ALMA Awards.

LEO JUAREZ, PRODUCER
NBC NEWS

Leo Juarez started out as a newspaper reporter at The Orange County Register before going to graduate school to gain TV experience. That's when he had the opportunity to apply to the NBC News Associates Program, which focuses on training and development to attract and retain diverse talent. "That's when my world changed forever," he says.

The year-long program involves four three-month rotations. Leo began on the network assignment desk in New York City to get a "big picture view of how the network operates." From there he did a stint at NBC Nightly News, then Weekend TODAY, and finally at NBC's Chicago bureau.

"We learned how newsgathering at a network happens," Leo says. "Working at Nightly News was an eye-opening experience, to see the best of the best in action, and how the program comes together during the course of each day.

"With all these rotations, you're thrown into the water and you've got to swim," he says. "At the same time, people are good about not letting you get overwhelmed and they're always available to provide guidance."

Today, Leo works as one of three bureau producers in Atlanta, providing segments for all the news shows in the Southeast region — from Texas to Florida to the Caribbean and Latin America. He's usually in the field producing live remotes, and even doing some shooting.

Looking back on his experience in the News Associates Program, he sees it as the network's investment in the future. "The majority of participants get jobs and probably move along a little faster because of the program," he says. "It gives you a lot of exposure in a short time and the opportunity to make an impression on, and to meet, a lot of talented people."

"I'm extremely grateful. I don't know if I'd be this far along if I hadn't been in the program. And it's great to stay in touch with my fellow News Associates colleagues who are in great producing jobs around the news department," he says. "We help each other, and we're all very motivated to do great things."

Leo also learned about ethics and journalistic integrity at NBC. "I saw that the people in news really care about this network, and they want to be as fair and accurate as humanly possible," he says. "It gave me a new appreciation for the news business. Every minute decision, day in and day out — the stuff that people don't see — is essentially an ethical decision, about being fair and accurate. It makes me proud to be a part of this organization."

WENDY LIU, DIRECTOR, CUSTOMER SERVICE OPERATIONS AND STRATEGY COMCAST CABLE CENTRAL DIVISION

As Director of Customer Service Operations and Strategy for the Central Division of Comcast Cable, Wendy Liu supports more than 5,000 customer care employees across 26 call centers serving a base of 9.8 million customers.

"My team and I enable our frontline employees to own the customer experience on every call and resolve the issue on the first call. We identify ways to help our agents to serve our customers better and to make the customer interaction a great experience for both the agent and the customer. We're behind the scenes, but our work impacts the customers on every interaction."

One reason why Wendy earned her current role was her successful participation in Fundamentals of Leadership (FOL), Comcast's leadership development program that focuses on developing high-potential employees at the middle-management level. The curriculum prepares participants for leadership roles by challenging them to redefine themselves as leaders, to reinvent business processes, and to leverage partnerships at work and in the community. The program also broadens their understanding of business operations through executive leader-facilitated discussions on management, company finances and measurements, and problem solving.

Since its introduction in 2002, more than 400 employees have completed the FOL program.

"FOL had long-term impact on me personally and professionally, which led to my promotion to Customer Care Director," says Wendy. "It changed the way I work and how I accomplish my goals. I learned how to leverage relationships, become a strong leader, and work across organizations to build lasting partnerships."

The lessons she learned can work in any setting. "In any organization, it really helps to be able to identify problems and issues and determine how to reach the outcome you want," she says.

"In the end, the program gave me confidence to advance as a leader, to put myself out there and express my ideas and my career goals," Wendy explains. "I can apply the lessons I've learned from the FOL program in my everyday work and home life."

"FOL is an incredibly well-organized, thoughtful and creative program," Wendy says. "It really helped me get the wheels in motion and I couldn't be more grateful for having the opportunity." Having been promoted to a director role for the Chicago market during her participation in the program, she has since been promoted to an expanded role supporting the Central Division.

Building Our Pipeline and Our Future

The recruitment, development, and promotion of all talent are top priorities for Comcast and NBCUniversal. The company's long-term success depends on our commitment to leadership development and training programs. The company uses proven methods — formal mentoring, executive leadership, boot camp programs, and incentives — to identify, hire, and promote high-potential candidates, diverse and non-diverse, across the board. Partnerships with external organizations that share our mission to provide greater career advancement opportunities for candidates augment our leadership development and pipeline programs.

We offer more than 80 advancement programs, both in-house and with external partners, for Comcast and NBCUniversal employees. See our complete list of development programs.

Executive Leadership Forum

Comcast and NBCUniversal share this flagship leadership program, focused on the development of leaders for the executive level. Targeting high-potential leaders from across the business, this intense program consists of three phases: executive leadership, operational knowledge, and personal leadership insight. The program deepens participants' understanding of our business, broadens their appreciation of various leadership styles, and enables them to use new leadership skills. Through in-class learning, group projects, and required community involvement, participants develop cross-functional knowledge, process improvement strategies, leadership skills, and team effectiveness. Since its introduction in 1999, more than 400 employees have completed the program.

▲ Executive Leadership Forum (ELF) participants pilot projects for the company to consider implementing. An energy-billing and power-supply-audit pilot presented by an ELF team in January 2011 was immediately implemented, saving the company in excess of $10 million annually.

The Financial Management Leadership Program

High-potential, early-career finance and accounting professionals obtain broad financial, operational, and leadership skills and experience through this three-year program. Executive mentoring, unique rotational assignments, and customized financial and leadership curriculum support our growing need for financial leaders with a depth of experience in the company's broad operations. Participants in the 2011 program included both Comcast and NBCUniversal employees.

Skills-Based Training for Frontline Employees

Our nationwide training and development organization, Comcast University, offers three training programs designed to provide career paths within the company. The CommTech program for field technicians teaches customer-interaction skills, installation and repair of advanced services, and safety. The XOC program for our eXcellence in Operations employees develops skills in powering systems, leakage detection, outage detection and prevention, and emergency restoration of fiber optics. Training for our customer care employees is designed to expand skills in customer interaction, problem solving and resolution, troubleshooting, and advanced knowledge of products and services. As employees progress through this training and demonstrate advanced skills, knowledge, and performance, they are promoted and receive increased compensation.

We are committed to providing employees with a safe, healthy, and productive work environment, free of recognized hazards. Each employee is expected to consider safety a personal responsibility, and we provide safety policies and procedures to support our employees every day. Employees are required to promptly report any potentially unsafe conditions, and they are required to work safely — including wearing safety equipment when required by the job.

Occupational Safety and Health Administration (OSHA) Compliance

Our safety program also focuses on compliance with all applicable Occupational Safety and Health Administration (OSHA) regulations across all Comcast and NBCUniversal businesses. We work on a wide range of issues covered by state and federal OSHA agencies, including fall protection, work zone safety, employee personal protection, and indoor air quality. In 2011, Comcast Cable logged a year-over-year reduction in OSHA recordable incidents of 5.8%. In addition, Comcast and NBCUniversal recorded zero work-related fatalities in 2011.

Motor Vehicle Incident Rate

Comcast employees drove more than 360 million miles in 2011 on company business, while logging a year-over-year motor vehicle incident reduction of 6.8%.

Workplace Environment

We are committed to taking all reasonable steps to ensure our business does not have an adverse impact on our environment. In the normal course of business, we undergo Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) inspections from local, state, and federal enforcement agencies.

Department of Transportation Compliance

Comcast and NBCUniversal have implemented programs to ensure compliance with all the applicable Federal Department of Transportation (DOT) and state agency rules and regulations.

improving our environment

Comcast and NBCUniversal, like many companies, are seeking ways to reduce our environmental footprint and our energy consumption. Through internal development and strategic partnerships, each area of our business is creating processes, capitalizing on innovative technology, and delivering our services in new ways that lessen our impact on the environment.

At Comcast, we are focused on reducing energy usage, both by our customers in the home and by our business operations. We are also reducing energy consumption and waste by operating the tenth-largest commercial fleet of hybrid vehicles in the United States. At NBCUniversal, we focus on sustainable best practices across our business including facilities, production, and theme parks. To improve our performance, we designed comprehensive guidelines to reduce energy consumption and waste.

reuse, recycle & repurpose

KURT FORD, SENIOR VICE PRESIDENT, PRODUCTION SERVICES & BECKY CASEY, DIRECTOR, PRODUCTION SERVICES, NBCUNIVERSAL

The Television Asset Center is a company institution that evolved organically to solve an important business problem: What could be done with all the sets, scenery, equipment, and furniture once a TV show goes off the air? Since NBCUniversal produces anywhere from 32 to 48 shows at one time, there are tens of thousands of items that can be reused.

"We started in the late 1980s, when we realized there was value in keeping and reusing sets for children's shows on Saturday morning — way before many of us understood what 'green' meant," says Kurt Ford, senior vice president of production services at NBCUniversal.

With a focused intent to reuse and recycle sets, the next step was to address all the assets from a production when a show wraps — assets such as props, wardrobe, set decoration, construction materials, office supplies, and furniture. A comprehensive reuse program was created that considered systems for returning all assets to one central location, completing an inventory of assets, methods of reuse, as well as shipping and storing viability. The Television Asset Center was formed to house this undertaking. At the end of 2011, the Asset Center housed well over 100,000 items.

"Now when a show wraps, there's a highly efficient and organized process in place to collect and store the assets, which we turn around very quickly," says Becky Casey, director of production services. "It's comprehensive — we bring all the assets under one umbrella — and environmentally impactful."

When a new show gets the green light and office space is secured, the Asset Center turns into a shopping mall. "Set decorators, costumers, propmasters, grips, and production assistants come in and grab a double-decker cart, shop for what they need, sign everything out, and take it away that day for free," Becky explains.

In Los Angeles, productions like Parenthood and The Office utilize the Asset Center to supplement their new sets and needs, continuing reuse well into the season. Out-of-town productions such as Grimm also use the Asset Center to stock their sets. In addition to visiting the Asset Center in person, production teams in other

locations can search the Asset Center's online database, request what they want, and have it delivered. A new and improved website, soon to be launched, will allow shows to view their own inventory in storage, as well as review all sets, floor plans, wall photos, and open stock pieces available for use.

Not all the assets inventoried find their way onto another show, but with an eye on minimizing environmental impact, the TV Asset Center looks for ways to recycle. "We keep and reuse most of our items, but some assets are auctioned off, some are donated to charities or student films, and some are loaned to museums.

"Repurposing all of these assets cuts down on waste and construction, and generates significant savings, since a great deal of these materials would have to be acquired — about $750,000 in savings in production costs annually," Kurt explains.

With such efficiency and cost savings — as well as the company's commitment to recycling — the TV Asset Center warehouse recently doubled in size to a 160,000-square-foot reuse facility. "We're even looking into duplicating the model in Toronto or New York, where many shows are produced," says Becky.

RONNI CAROMANO, SENIOR MANAGER, SELF-INSTALL OPERATIONS COMCAST CABLE

Self-installation is a growing consumer trend. For more and more consumers, the act of “unboxing” — removing a product from its packaging — is part of what makes that product so attractive to them and makes them feel good about their purchase. In 2011, Comcast merged this consumer trend and our interest in sustainability by redesigning our existing single- and double-product Self-Install Kits and introducing a new Triple-Play Self-Install Kit. Self-installation now comprises more than 20% of all new connects to Comcast cable services.

“While we’ve made Self-Install Kits available to customers for years, consumer demand has really been turned up only over the last few years,” said Ronni Caromano, senior manager of Comcast self-installation operations. “Customers want convenience, and many are comfortable enough with technology to install their service themselves, on their own schedule. We’ve studied industry best practices and conducted focus groups with our customers to create a self-install product and process that’s easy to open, install, and activate.”

Comcast’s Self-Install Kits are based on four key design principles: simple instructions, clearly labeled equipment, well-organized presentation of all materials, and online activation. Working with green-minded printing and fulfillment vendors, Self-Install Kits and packing materials are 100% recyclable.

“Everything required to set up and activate Comcast TV, phone, and Internet services is included in a clean, simple presentation with instructions printed on the inside of the box lid and ‘a place for everything’ accessory tray,” Ronni explains. “Every successful Self-Install Kit installation improves customer satisfaction, reduces business expenses as we need to roll fewer trucks to customer homes, and minimizes our impact on the environment.”

Thousands of Self-Install Kits ship from six warehouses every day to customers around the country. Many customers order more than one kit, as they have multiple televisions and computers to equip. But every successful self-installation means one less Comcast Cable truck dispatched to a customer’s home — approximately 1 million fewer trips in 2011 — reducing fuel usage and harmful greenhouse gas emissions.

“Ramping up our focus on Self-Install Kits is all part of our commitment to quality, to improving the customer experience, to innovation in process improvement, and to protecting the environment,” Ronni says.

Green is Universal Programming

Each month, NBCUniversal reaches more than 100 million consumers via our 50 on-air, online, and mobile platforms. With a diverse portfolio that includes news, entertainment, sports, and lifestyle brands, environmental programming takes on many shades of green throughout the year. To celebrate Earth Week and Green Week, NBCUniversal dedicated programming across all of its brands to inform and educate audiences about the environment.

EcoBill

Comcast offers a paperless invoice program, EcoBill, enabling our customers the option of receiving their bills electronically. At the end of 2011, 5.4 million Comcast customers had enrolled in EcoBill, representing more than 24% of our customer base. The EcoBill program conserves more than 84 million sheets of paper and 137 million envelopes on an annual basis.

Universal Studios Home Entertainment

NBCUniversal's commitment to reduce carbon emissions and lessen our environmental footprint includes making the products we provide more environmentally sustainable.

Since June of 2009, all lithographs and product inserts have been printed on paper that contains 10% post-consumer waste, FSC-certified fibers, and 15% less paper fiber. We estimate nearly 1.3 million fewer pounds of carbon dioxide have been emitted since 2009 as a result.

All point-of-purchase corrugate displays are manufactured with 75% post-consumer waste and recycled-content material; most are printed with environmentally friendly, water-soluble inks.

▲ In 2009, we switched to a DVD case with 20% less plastic than standard cases. To date, a total of 155 million of the new DVD cases have been used, representing a 1,600-ton reduction in plastic consumption.

Universal Orlando Resort®

Whether through conservation, recycling, education or designing theme park attractions, Universal Orlando Resort is minimizing its impact on the environment. We have more than 2,300 recycling bins, and we recycled 255 tons of plastic and glass bottles, 23 tons of aluminum cans, 1,188 tons of cardboard, 745 tons of yard waste, and 3,300 wood pallets in 2011.

We also saved approximately 491,000 kWh as a result of increased energy-conservation efforts, including more efficient lighting, such as new LED fixtures inside the E.T. Adventure® attraction at Universal Studios Florida®; and a new, more efficient air compressor to power special effects for the Cat in the Hat™ attraction at Islands of Adventure. The Simpsons Ride™ also conserves energy by incorporating an "on demand" hydraulic power system. Total energy savings across the entire resort during 2011 was enough to power approximately 40 average-size homes in the Orlando area for an entire year.

We use cleaner-burning biodiesel fuel in all our mobile diesel equipment and water taxis, and we use environmentally friendly horticultural practices, such as supplementing nutrients in potting soil with coffee grounds.

Similar sustainability efforts are underway at Universal Studios Hollywood®, where we recycled more than 400 tons of plastic bottles in 2011 and diverted 93% of our waste from local landfills.

All three Loews Hotels at Universal Orlando Resort are certified members of the Florida Green Lodging program.

production

Both behind the scenes and in front of the camera, our TV and Film operations are integrating sustainability into our productions. While the work we do to increase awareness of the environment on-air and on-film is highly visible, audiences might not realize that we are also working hard behind the scenes to “green” our production practices.

Hop — Green Behind the Scenes

In 2011, Chris Meledandri's Illumination Entertainment created the worldwide live action-CG comedy hit Hop. The entire crew from this live action and animated family feature worked together to implement environmentally friendly practices throughout the production process.

In addition to comprehensive recycling on set, Hop caterers and crew separated food-related waste to be sent to a commercial composting facility, diverting 34 tons of on-location set waste from reaching a landfill. All crew members were issued reusable water bottles, preventing more than 15,000 individual plastic water bottles from being consumed. Energy-efficient technology was used where possible, including rechargeable batteries for the sound department and solar-powered portable restrooms for use on location. Previously used materials were acquired for set construction, and work tables and costumes were cleaned with environmentally responsible detergents and dry cleaning. The Hop production office used 30% recycled-content paper, ENERGY STAR appliances, and nontoxic soaps and cleaners.

Data Centers

To be one of the world's leading media, entertainment, and communications companies requires the use of significant resources — but it doesn't mean we can't conserve energy. At each of Comcast's 12 national data centers, maximizing efficiency in our operations is an important priority. In 2011, even as we continued to grow as a company, we reduced both our data center space needs and energy requirements by installing "virtualization infrastructure" that enabled 34% of our existing servers to handle multiple applications.

We embrace the same energy-efficient practices when we open or expand data centers. One of our largest and newest facilities, the 10,000-square-foot North Lake Data Center opened in Illinois last year, has far less energy needs because of new technologies that allow us to draw on the outdoor air to cool the center 71% of the year.

Our use of these and other new technologies will enable Comcast to continue to realize true energy savings.

NBCUniversal's data center refurbishing project "virtualized" 60% of the center's physical servers and shut down 2,000 physical machines. The new center uses cold containment aisles and a fiber topology that replaced 300,000 feet of copper cable, as well as power-metering sensors. In total, the company retired and recycled 47 tons of hardware and cut power consumption by 11%.

As a result, NBCUniversal achieved the #5 ranking in Computer World's Green IT Awards.

Newsweek Green Rankings

Comcast was recognized as a top 100 company by Newsweek magazine as part of its annual Green Rankings "U.S. 500" list, which assesses the environmental performance of the nation's 500 largest companies. In addition, for the first time, Comcast made Newsweek's Green Rankings "Global 500" list, placing among the top 200 of the largest publicly traded companies based in developed and emerging markets worldwide. Newsweek's Green Rankings are derived by looking at three components — environmental impact, environmental management, and disclosure.

Comcast Warehousing

Many Comcast warehouse facilities have installed or are in the process of installing balers and compactors, which bundle unused cardboard for recycling. As a result, our warehouses have reduced waste, in some cases by more than 50%.

LEED Certification

Comcast Corporation's headquarters in downtown Philadelphia, called Comcast Center, is one of the tallest LEED-certified buildings in the United States. The 58-story building, which earned LEED Gold status for its core and shell, stands 975 feet tall, and takes advantage of high-performance glass and sunscreens, as well as louvers in the atria, to maximize use of daylight.

The windows block 60% of the sun's heat while allowing in 70% of the daylight, helping to reduce lighting and cooling expenses. Comcast Center's water-saving fixtures save 3 million gallons of drinking water every year, using 41% less water than a typical office building. All parking is underground, eliminating exposed heat-absorbing asphalt, and the exposed plaza surface is shaded by trellises and trees, reducing the urban "heat-island" effect. Comcast Center operates a year-round recycling program, and is cleaned with Earth-friendly products.

Comcast Center was constructed with materials containing high levels of recycled content, and 80% of Comcast Center's wood products were sourced from forests with certification from the Forest Stewardship Council.

Fleet and Hybrid Transportation

With the tenth-largest commercial fleet of hybrid vehicles in the United States, Comcast Cable continues to purchase alternative fuel vehicles while exploring new technologies with automobile manufacturers. Our new vehicle procurement is 80% alternative-fuel capable, with all vans and light-duty pickups flex-fuel-capable, and hybrid passenger vehicles.

Reduced Truck Rolls

Through our focus on innovation and self-help, many Comcast Cable customers are able to install or upgrade our products independently and solve problems online without requiring a visit from a Comcast technician. In addition, through focus and additional training, Comcast technicians were able to successfully install more customers, and repair more service challenges the first time. As a result, we reduced the number of truck rolls to customer homes by 4 million from 2010 to 2011, saving about 2 million gallons of gasoline.

we operate more than 6,300 hybrid and flex-fuel vehicles, resulting in a reduction of 60,000 gallons of unleaded gas and more than a 25% decrease in greenhouse gas emissions in 2011

Virtual Customer Care Representatives

We have implemented a successful virtual customer care representative program, enabling almost 1,400 customer care agents — nearly 5% of our care workforce — to work from home. In addition to improving employee satisfaction, the program reduces the need to construct and expand call centers, allows employees to work part-time or in split shifts, and reduces carbon emissions related to commuting to and from work.

Eco Ovation

NBCUniversal recognizes employees from around the world who are driving innovation and smarter business practices through more sustainable operations.

In 2011, 31 Eco Awards were given to individual employees and teams for driving measurable sustainability advances in their core business. Winning initiatives included the use of LED lighting, innovative studio design, and water conservation.

ENERGY STAR Compliant

Comcast is working with its partners, including set-top box manufacturers and silicon providers, to meet ENERGY STAR requirements. Nearly 100% of the boxes we will buy in the future will be ENERGY STAR compliant. Currently, every digital transport adapter (DTA) we have deployed — more than 20 million over the last three years, and most through our self-install process — meet ENERGY STAR requirements.

Many of the boxes in our customers' homes today are on the ENERGY STAR Set-Top Box Qualified Product List. We are also actively working with our partners to create integrated "systems on a chip" that require less power to operate, and migrating features, such as program guides and apps, from the set-top box to the cloud. This could help simplify box functionality, which in turn could help reduce the amount of energy needed to operate them.

We're engaged with our vendor partners and with CableLabs to create a mechanism to allow for Light Sleep and Deep Sleep states on the set-top boxes. These will allow boxes to operate more efficiently by switching off core functionality when not actively in use. Using this strategy on the latest set-top box models, we have been able to spin down the set-top box hard drives during periods of inactivity, providing a power savings of about 20%. In order to gain additional energy savings, Comcast, our silicon partners, vendors, and CableLabs are actively working together to define the network, box, and end-user operations requirements. These will lead to additional savings in 2013, 2014, and beyond.

Supply Chain

The Comcast Supply Chain team is committed to maintaining an environmentally sound workplace and to partnering with our vendors to implement and promote green initiatives, including recycling, repurposing, and waste reduction programs.

Original equipment manufacturers have reduced in size or eliminated the manuals normally enclosed with packaging for cable set-top boxes and modems; these manuals are now available online.

Our vendors no longer use styrofoam end-caps to secure equipment during transport to Comcast warehouses. A 100% recyclable pulp end-cap is used, or vendors "bulk" the equipment, carefully placing each device in a recyclable bag with dividers and securing it to a pallet.

We require our vendors to be in compliance with all relevant laws relating to environmental protection, occupational safety and health, resource conservation, hazardous waste transportation, toxic substances, water pollution, and clean air, among many others.

working with integrity

Comcast and NBCUniversal are committed to creating and fostering a work environment that promotes integrity and ensures compliance with international, federal, and state laws and regulations in our relationships with customers and other businesses. We operate with the highest standards of honesty, fairness, and integrity to create a great place to work for our employees and to deliver long-term value and shareholder returns.

"In a big company you need certain fundamentals to believe in. Around here, everyone knows that integrity comes first."

DAVID MCCORMICK, VICE PRESIDENT, STANDARDS AND OMBUDSMAN NBCUNIVERSAL

For nearly 20 years, David McCormick has worked tirelessly to make sure that NBC News stands for accuracy, fairness, and independence. As vice president of Standards and Ombudsman, David, and NBCUniversal's dedicated News Standards Unit, set standards for newsgathering and reporting, prepare NBC News policies and guidelines, and hold mandatory training sessions regularly to ensure an adherence to the highest levels of ethics and integrity throughout our news organizations.

David's depth of experience in journalism as an investigative producer, news director, bureau chief, producer, and executive producer position him to serve as a "super editor," previewing stories to make sure they are fair and accurate.

"I offer another set of eyes and ears to a story, bringing an independent view at the end of the reporting process. Since I have nothing personally invested in the story, I am the ultimate viewer," David says. "My role is to determine if stories are well-sourced, if documentation is in hand to substantiate the facts reported, and if all sides of an issue are represented fairly in the final story."

David spends his days reviewing stories and full-length programs before they go on air, reading scripts, reviewing raw transcripts of interviews, and discussing with journalists the reliability of sources and their independent verification of information. "Experience tells me when to peel the onion back a little bit more, to dig a little bit deeper."

David also provides training to journalists across NBC News, including MSNBC, CNBC, our owned local television stations, Telemundo, and other program areas. This training is designed to make sure NBC

News journalists understand that all news content — whether delivered by broadcast, cable, the Internet, mobile, or other devices not yet invented — must maintain the highest standards of journalism.

"Social media is a growing means of distribution for us, but we must be as fair in our reporting in only 140 characters on Twitter as we would be in a full-length feature news story," David explains. "Our journalists need to reorient their thought processes to remember Facebook, blogs, and tweets require the highest standards — no matter the competitive pressure to get the news out fast — and that's one element of our training."

Today's news environment is highly competitive and constantly evolving, but it all comes down to trust. "The news business is built on trust. Trust with sources. Trust with reporters and producers," David explains. "Complex and challenging stories, stories that need to be told, require a lot of work before they are ready to be labeled 'NBC News.' That effort is expected of us, and that's how we maintain the trust the American people have in us."

JAY OPPERMAN, EXECUTIVE DIRECTOR, SECURITY AND PRIVACY COMCAST CABLE

As the nation's largest Internet provider, we have more than 18 million high-speed customers, and Comcast is taking a leadership role in developing policy, technology tools, and customer outreach to help keep each one of them safe and secure online. "We are working to be the customer's trusted adviser on Internet safety. Not only is it good for business, but it's just the right thing to do," says Jay Opperman, executive director of security and privacy at Comcast Cable.

From viruses and hackers to malicious software and phishing, online security threats are real and varied. So, too, are Comcast's responses, as Jay works every day to develop and implement new and improved customer-security strategies, products, and services to keep our Internet users safe.

Comcast partners with many organizations — including Common Sense Media, National Cyber Security Alliance, NetSmartz, and Symantec — to find solutions and raise awareness about online security issues. We also work with the Family Online Safety Institute to develop public policy and special events to promote industry best practices, and we sponsor the Internet Keep Safe Coalition (ikeepSAFE.org), joining with governors, attorneys general, educators, and others to teach families to use the Internet safely.

Jay also helps lead the Comcast Customer Security Assurance group, a dedicated team responding to real-time online security and safety threats. The group reaches out to about 1,000 customers every day, alerting them to potentially compromised personal and financial information. "The goal is to try to help customers feel safe and secure, and to do that proactively, not reactively," he says.

With Jay's guidance, Comcast in 2011 unveiled the Constant Guard Protection Suite, an Internet safety solution available to XFINITY Internet customers at no additional cost. A desktop application worth $360, Constant Guard provides the tools to help prevent, detect, respond to, and manage security threats. The program also sends out automatic service notices when a customer's security — usually concerning theft of identification — appears to be at risk. "We changed the culture from warning customers to assisting them," Jay says, adding that Constant Guard adds value to Comcast business operations and helps build trust with our customers. "Of all the major Internet service providers, Comcast now offers the most comprehensive online security protection, from education and prevention to remediation and recovery."

To help develop policy and find additional innovative solutions to security threats, Jay represents Comcast on an advisory committee created by the Federal Communications Commission (FCC). Called the Communications, Security, Reliability, and Interoperability Council, this committee focuses on timely, industry-led efforts to share ideas, discuss solutions, and establish best practices.

"I see my job as ensuring that Comcast's Internet services are providing the proper safeguards for our customers," Jay says, "and that we are all doing our part so we can surf the 'net' safely and securely."

"We changed the culture from warning customers to assisting them."

Compliance Program

Comcast takes various actions intended to ensure that we have the internal processes in place to comply with applicable international, federal, state, and local laws and regulations, as well as with company policies and contracts. Monitoring and supervising the Compliance Program of a large, highly regulated organization like Comcast is a complex endeavor, and we are committed to ensuring that our program is effective and appropriate in light of our compliance risks. Our corporate General Counsel, Arthur R. Block, who is a "high-level person" within the meaning of the United States Sentencing Guidelines, has overall responsibility for the Compliance Program and regularly reports on it to our Board. He has appointed Jennifer Heller as Chief Compliance Officer, who has day-to-day operational responsibility for the program, assessing our principal compliance risks under applicable international, federal, state, and local laws and regulations, and taking reasonable steps to ensure that we have standards and procedures designed to prevent and detect criminal conduct, among other tasks.

Code of Conduct

Our Code of Conduct represents our business philosophy and values, and it defines how we conduct business. All of our officers, directors, and employees are required to carefully read, be trained on, and adhere to the policies set forth in our Code of Conduct, and they must annually certify their compliance. Most recently updated in January 2012, our Code of Conduct covers many integrity issues, and includes such topics as Complying with Competition Laws, Anti-Corruption Laws, Environment, Health and Safety, Fair Employment Practices, and Privacy. In recognition of our global operations, the Code of Conduct is available to employees in at least eight languages. Our Code of Conduct can be found under the Corporate Governance tab of our Investor Relations website at cmcsa.com.

Privacy

We hold the privacy of our customers and employees in the highest regard and meet the very strict standards of the federal privacy laws that apply specifically to our industry, as well as those standards included in other federal and state laws.

We clearly tell our customers about our privacy policies and practices by sending them annual privacy notices, and our privacy policies and practices for our video, high-speed Internet, and voice services are easily accessible on our website at comcast.com/Corporate/Customers/Policies/CustomerPrivacy.html. We also continue to employ extensive protections for our customers against pretexting, hacking, and other attempts at identity theft, or unauthorized access to account information. And we have a security team that immediately investigates and responds to privacy and security issues, as well as ensures that proper privacy and security practices are implemented in the product design and deployment process.

Anti-Piracy Initiatives

Protecting intellectual property is an important priority for Comcast and NBCUniversal. NBCUniversal works with a diverse group of organizations, including the U.S. Chamber of Commerce, Business Action to Stop Counterfeiting and Piracy (BASCAP), and Copyright Alliance, as well as with a number of industry trade groups, to raise awareness about this critically important problem and develop strategies to prevent the digital theft of our TV programs, films, and video content.

Statement on Political and Trade Association Activity

Participation in political activities, whether done directly or through our involvement with trade associations or other organizations, is important to achieving our business objectives. It is critical that all of our activities in this area rigorously comply with applicable laws, regulations, and our own standards of integrity. For this reason, our essential policy regarding political activities is set forth in our Code of Conduct. Additional details on our implementation and compliance activities in connection with the policy are contained in the Comcast Corporation Statement on Political and Trade Association Activity.

Both the Code of Conduct and the Statement on Political and Trade Association Activity can be found on our website at cmcsa.com/governance.cfm.

Comcast does not make independent expenditures; contribute to federal, state, or local political committees that only make independent expenditures (so-called "Super PACs"); nor contribute to any organization for the purpose of funding independent expenditures.

we have made considerable progress on these commitments, meeting — and in many cases exceeding — what we set out to do

NBCUniversal Transaction

In connection with Comcast's acquisition of NBCUniversal in 2010, we announced a number of public interest benefits and commitments that will allow us to better serve the entertainment, communications, and information needs of American consumers. These benefits and commitments represent part of our business plan, expand on the existing strengths of Comcast and NBCUniversal, and highlight the new opportunities this combination makes possible.

In addition, the Department of Justice (DOJ) and the Federal Communications Commission (FCC) placed certain conditions on the NBCUniversal transaction, including competitive, public interest, and diversity conditions that track many of our voluntary commitments. In February of 2012, Comcast and NBCUniversal filed our first annual report detailing our implementation of the conditions adopted by the FCC in the NBCUniversal Transaction Order. More at comcast.com/corporate/about/corporateinfo/fccannualreport.html

As the report shows, our commitments and the conditions, though extensive, have been incorporated into our business activities and have become part of the company's "DNA." The substantial public interest benefits promised by the transaction and the competitive safeguards sought by the government are being realized. We are proud of the achievements of our first year — from increasing broadband adoption among low-income Americans to increasing local news coverage, expanding the carriage of diverse programming to committing to launch new independent channels with diverse ownership.

Comcast Broadband Opportunity Plan — Internet Essentials

In keeping with our voluntary commitment to introduce the Comcast Broadband Opportunity Program, we launched Internet Essentials, the largest and most comprehensive broadband adoption program in America. By the end of 2011, the program had already connected more than 41,000 homes to the Internet, most for the first time. We also announced significant enhancements to the program that will increase the number of eligible households, make it easier for them to sign up for the program, and enhance the attractiveness of the service. More in the Community Investment section on Closing the Digital Divide.

Carriage of Diverse Networks

We committed to increased carriage of diverse networks and made good on that promise, increasing carriage of the Africa Channel by two million homes; Mnet by four million homes; and TVOne by 600,000 homes. Comcast also expanded distribution of seven Hispanic or Spanish-language independent networks by 14 million homes, surpassing the target of three networks and 10 million homes in our commitment. More in the Diversity & Inclusion section on Diverse Content.

Independent Networks

We committed to launch 10 new independent channels by 2019, and moved quickly to begin to make that a reality ahead of schedule. We have announced plans to launch four independent networks — Aspire, BabyFirst Americas, El Rey, and REVOLT — well within the time frame required by the conditions. More in the Diversity & Inclusion section on Independent Networks.

With the launch of BBC World News, we are already half-way through our eight-year commitment after one year.

Availability of Content On Demand and Online

Comcast and NBCUniversal have committed to make more content available on video on demand (VOD) and online, and we have over-delivered. NBC.com continues to be a vibrant source of programming online, with the expansion of primetime content and growth in live streaming of sports events from NBC Sports, including Super Bowl XLVI, which was streamed online by a record 2.1 million unique viewers. We have increased the number of XFINITY On Demand choices available — at no additional charge — to about 24,000 per month, up from 15,000. In a major first, Comcast's XFINITY VOD service is the only on demand service that offers shows from all four broadcast networks as soon as the day after they air.

Enrichment of Local Programming

Comcast and NBCUniversal committed to preserve and enrich the output of local news, local public affairs, and other public interest programming on its NBC- and Telemundo-owned stations. We have delivered on that promise by investing millions of dollars to expand local news at the 10 owned NBC stations by hiring more than 130 new people, investing in new vehicles and equipment, launching new consumer and investigative units in five markets, and including new, round-the-clock, local "nonstop" channels on the stations' digital multicast channels in five additional markets. Similarly, the Telemundo Station Group is making a multimillion-dollar investment to upgrade local technical infrastructure at its top Hispanic market stations to provide local high-definition news production capability. News continues to be a hallmark of the NBC Network, which recently launched Rock Center with Brian Williams, the first new primetime news-magazine since 2002.

Additionally, the NBC Owned Television Stations division and the Telemundo Station Group each committed to locally produce an additional 1,000 hours of local news and information programming, and they significantly over-delivered. The NBC Owned Television Stations division announced an increase of close to 2,000 scheduled hours of local news programming at its 10 stations, exceeding the commitment's requirement by nearly 100%. The Telemundo Station Group also increased local news and public affairs programming at its stations by more than 1,200 hours in an expansion initiative completed in January 2012, exceeding total hours of new Telemundo news programming in the commitment by more than 20%.

Partnerships with Non-Profit News Organizations

NBCUniversal committed to expand its partnerships with non-profit news organizations to mirror the arrangement already in place between NBC 7 San Diego and the VoiceofSanDiego.org, and, after running a transparent process, NBCUniversal selected four new partners to help enhance local news coverage. Pro Publica has partnered with NBC 4 New York, The Chicago Reporter has partnered with NBC 5 Chicago, WHYY has partnered with NBC 10 Philadelphia, and KPCC Southern California Public Radio has partnered with NBC 4 LA.

Empowering Parents

Comcast and NBCUniversal committed to add to our existing efforts to empower parents in making informed programming choices for their children, and we are proud of our achievements. After careful review and redesign, NBC improved the visibility of all ratings icons by enlarging their size by more than 50% and ensured their readability with high-contrast background-to-foreground color combinations. All ratings icons, including the post-commercial break events, are displayed on screen for 15 seconds. Additionally, all owned cable networks complied with the National Cable Telecommunication Association's 2005 Network Policy on the size, placement, and duration of TV ratings icons.

On-screen parental ratings icons were added to NBCUniversal-produced or -licensed TV programming provided to 14 NBCUniversal websites, plus Hulu.com and XfinityTV.com.

We invested more than $17 million in PSA campaigns focused on parental controls and digital literacy, plus other topics such as childhood obesity and FDA nutritional guidelines. This investment exceeded our commitment by more than $2 million.

We expanded our library of Common Sense Media content, including thousands of review videos, tip videos, ratings, and recommendations that are integrated with our VOD service. More in the Media that Matters section on Common Sense Media.

Children's Programming

Comcast and NBCUniversal committed to increase children's programming choices, and we increased children's on demand programming by about 1,000 choices, exceeding our first-year commitment by 500 choices, or 100%. Total children's VOD programming choices now average 3,000 per month. The NBC Owned Television Stations division is airing an additional fourth hour of children's educational/instructional (E/I) programming every week on each of its 10 stations' multicast channels. Similarly, Telemundo also added an additional hour per week of children's programming across its owned stations.

Expansion of Comcast's Broadband Network

We committed to expanding our broadband network by 1,500 miles in 2011 and upgrading for Internet service in at least six additional rural communities, and we significantly over-delivered on that promise — expanding our network by 2,044 miles, surpassing the first-year target by 544 miles. This expansion enabled Internet service in 33 rural communities, exceeding our commitment by 27 communities. In addition, we extended our broadband plant to 199,876 additional homes, satisfying almost 50% of our three-year commitment of 400,000 homes.

Strengthening of Public, Educational, and Governmental (PEG) Programming

Comcast committed to strengthen PEG programming by developing a pilot program to host PEG content on demand and online and Comcast successfully initiated placement of community-designated PEG content on XFINITY On Demand and in online test platforms in six pilot communities: Fresno, CA; Hialeah, FL; Houston, TX; Medford, MA; Peterborough, NH; and Philadelphia, PA. Comcast has branded this initiative "Project Open Voice."

NBC Television Network Investments

We pledged to make focused investments to ensure that the NBC Television Network remains vibrant and competitive, and we have been true to our word. Comcast has invested an additional $300 million for NBCUniversal programming, $200 million of which was targeted at primetime for the NBC Network. In addition, NBC received an infusion of creative energy and organizational support to "go big" and reclaim our leadership among the broadcast networks.

NBC Sports

Comcast and NBCUniversal committed to maintain major sporting events on the NBC broadcast network, and not only did we do so, but 2011 also saw substantial investments in sports programming. We successfully extended our rights for many years to National Football League programming, National Hockey League programming, and to the Olympics. Telemundo will feature World Cup and other FIFA soccer events from 2015 through 2022.

Diversity & Inclusion

Comcast and NBCUniversal committed to enhance diversity in various areas, and we have gone above and beyond our commitments, striving to develop the premier model of diversity and inclusion in the communications and entertainment industries. More in the Diversity & Inclusion section.

Venture Capital

Comcast committed to establish a $20 million venture capital fund to expand opportunities for businesses with minority ownership in new media content and applications, and we delivered on that promise as well. Comcast Ventures created the fund and, as a first investment, partnered with DreamIt Ventures in Philadelphia. This program has funded training for five start-up businesses with minority ownership as each developed a business case and pilot.

Comcast Listens: Encouraging Employees to Speak Up

Comcast is committed to an environment of open communication where employees feel comfortable raising concerns and are not distracted by unresolved problems at work. If employees see or suspect illegal or unethical conduct, we want them to report it. Whether it's about a day-to-day or more significant workplace problem, a concern about suspected illegal or unethical conduct, or even an idea for a better way

In 2011, we received approximately 2,000 reports through Comcast Listens. The vast majority were routine matters related to Human Resources activities. Every report was logged, acknowledged, and reviewed or investigated by the Comcast Listens team. Almost half resulted in some corrective action being taken by the company. The other half, while investigated, were not found to need additional action or a remedy.
