Gun control has become one of the most polarizing issues in America today. It seems to come down to a very simplistic debate concerning priorities: the 2nd Amendment right to bear arms and protect oneself vs. the right to try and reduce gun-related violence. Currently, the United States is ranked number one in gun ownership and gun violence among wealthy nations, but also has some of the least restrictive and loosest gun control laws. The issue of gun control seems to emerge immediately after a mass shooting, such as Columbine, Sandy Hook, Las Vegas, and Marjorie Stoneman Douglas High

Some people believe that any measure of gun control will result in a loss of their 2nd Amendment constitutional rights. Others believe the 2nd Amendment will not be violated with the implementation of mandatory background checks, waiting periods, etc. In your opinion, which side has a stronger case? To strengthen your argument, use your observations and experiences, and create it."
