

Helpful Hints

CONDIMENTS

- Stay away from heavy dressings, especially on salads. Instead of using regular dressings, use light – or seasoned rice vinegar with a little olive oil.
- Use nonfat or low fat mayonnaise – or plain yogurt.
- When sautéing foods, try using a small amount of olive oil or broth.

PREPARATION

- Baking, broiling, steaming, and grilling are food preparation methods that use little or no fat. These are healthier alternatives to frying, and an easy way to reduce fat and calorie intake.

TYPES OF FOODS

- Focus on eating whole fruits and vegetables instead of fruit juice. The whole foods contain more fiber, fewer calories, and are more filling than their juice counterparts. Eat a variety of fruits and vegetables.
- Trim any visible fat from meat; remove skin from chicken before eating. Moisture can be maintained by seasoning the chicken and cooking it wrapped in foil (if grilling), or covering with liquids such as broths.
- Use nonfat (skim) or low fat dairy products. If you are currently used to whole milk, try gradually reducing the fat content – first try 2%, then 1% milk, etc.
- Eat whole grain products. These have more nutrients, including fiber – and are more filling.
- Keep in mind that “fat free” packaged products does not mean “calorie free”. In fact, many of the fat free products actually have higher calories and less fiber.

GENERAL

- At each meal, try to include a minimum of three different food groups. Use the USDA's new MyPlate.gov (<http://www.choosemyplate.gov/>) as a guideline.
- Remember: Portion size matters!
- When evaluating your meal plan, consider what you eat over a period of a week, as opposed to what you eat each day.
- Focus on making one or two changes at a time. Each change, no matter how small, is progress.
- This is not a “diet” – it is a “Stepwise Approach to Healthier Living”!

Please consult your physician before beginning this, or any other exercise or nutrition program. The menus presented within this booklet are meant to be used as guidelines. See your physician for your specific weight level.

Dan Isaacson's Nutritional Program for total gym®

A Stepwise Approach to Healthier Eating

“Welcome to a healthier new lifestyle that is designed to help you look and feel better!”

Dear Friend,

One of the more important things I've learned over the years as a personal trainer is that, while most people know the value of healthy eating and regular exercise, many simply don't make the effort to change their poor habits.

Fortunately, the good news is that making a healthy lifestyle change is not only a good decision but it can also be easier than you think! My simple 3-step program and menu guidelines are designed to teach you an effective way to develop healthy eating habits by maintaining a well-balanced meal plan. Using the MyPlate as your guideline, you can learn to select the right combination of food groups to create nutritious, balanced and healthy meals. This eating plan, together with a regular workout routine on your “Total Gym”, is a winning combination to a healthier, new world for you.

Please take a few minutes now to read through this booklet carefully. This easy, 1-2-3 nutritional program will help get you on the road to a healthier new lifestyle that can last for a lifetime!

Sincerely,

Dan Isaacson

Overview

Most of you are aware that making lifestyle changes can be challenging, especially with your eating habits. However, many experts agree individuals who make small changes in their lifestyle behaviors over a period of time are more successful in maintaining those changes than individuals who try to make major adjustments in a short period of time. The simple, 3-step approach we recommend in this program can be your ladder to success.

3 Steps to Healthier Eating

STEP ONE: WATER

You should make an effort to drink more water throughout the day unless you are already taking in adequate amounts of water and other healthy beverages. Many people drink far less water and healthy beverages necessary to maintain proper hydration. It is recommended to have a total daily beverage intake of 13 cups for generally healthy men and 9 cups for generally healthy women. Extended periods of work, exercise and hot, humid weather can also increase your need for water. You may want to use a 16-oz water bottle to help monitor your water intake throughout the day. For example, fill your bottle after breakfast and empty it by the time of your first snack. Repeat this process throughout the day. It can be a good way to establish a healthy behavior to drinking water throughout the day. Always check with your own doctor for specific recommendations for you.

STEP TWO: TIMING OF MEALS

Too often many of us skip meals and snacks throughout the day. It's a good recommendation to create a regular routine and try to space your meals and snacks 2-3 hours apart.

Here's a suggested routine that you can use as a guide and adjust accordingly to your work, family and personal schedules.

Breakfast	Snack	Lunch	Snack	Dinner
7:00 AM	9:00 AM	12:00 PM	3:00 PM	6:00 PM

STEP THREE: FOOD CHOICES

Your nutrition plan consists of two things: the food choices you make and the amount food you eat. A healthy nutrition plan, based on a variety of food choices with moderate portion sizes, is a key to your success that will ensure a well-balanced eating program.

In addition to the food choices you make, paying attention to portion sizes is also important. Read food labels and become familiar with the portion sizes listed. Take the time to weigh and measure food so you recognize what 1/2 cup of pasta looks like. You may be amazed when you compare what you thought was one serving with the actual amount contained in that serving.

Although weighing and measuring food is preferred, you may find yourself in situations where you cannot do this easily (e.g. eating at a restaurant). In those instances, use the following guide to estimate portion sizes.

Serving	Looks Like	Food
1 cup	1 fist	Raw vegetables, ready-to-eat cereal, yogurt, milk
1/2 cup	1/2 fist	Pasta, rice, cooked cereal, chopped, cooked, or canned fruit
2-3 oz	Palm of hand	Meat, poultry, fish

Meal Plan

The meal plans included in this booklet provide approximately 60% of calories from carbohydrates, 20% from protein, and 20% from fat. Four meal plans are available, based upon different weight levels: less than 140 lbs., 140-169 lbs., 170-200 lbs., and greater than 200 lbs. It is recommended to use this guideline as a place to begin to increase your nutrient base, reduce your caloric intake and practice eating food on a more regular basis throughout the day. Each meal plan provides menus and guidelines for 5 days. Each plan, regardless of body weight, consists of 3 meals and 2 snacks. This approach helps minimize feelings of hunger.

As you review the meal plans, you may decide that you want to change some of the foods listed in the meal plans. For example, instead of eating a pear for lunch, you may prefer an orange. Changes within food groups (in this case, fruit), are fine – and encouraged. However, serving size should remain the same. For an easy online picture of the food groups and serving sizes, go to <http://www.choosemyplate.gov/foodgroups>. Again, it is fine to change choices within each food group. Avoid changing from different food groups. For example, a slice of bread (Grains) should not be substituted for broccoli (Vegetables). However, spinach could be substituted for the broccoli, as they are both in the Vegetables food group.

Note: Any product names provided in the daily meal plans and snack lists are not an endorsement; they are suggested guides. Always compare labels to choose the most nutritious version of the product.

Using MyPlate

The meal plans provided are suggested to help you make changes within your diet. They are not intended to be the only meal plans you ever follow. When you are ready to try moving beyond the suggested menus in this booklet, the USDA's new MyPlate.gov* (<http://www.choosemyplate.gov>) can be used to provide a practical, healthy approach to your meal planning. You can even further set up a practical plan by inputting your personal data with the help of <http://www.choosemyplate.gov/myplate/index.aspx>. Important main messages to consider:

- Balance your calories (Enjoy your food, but eat less; watch your portion sizes.)
- Look at the MyPlate pictorial: Make one-half of your plate fruits and vegetables, increase whole grains, switch to non-fat (skim) or 1% low fat milk.
- Compare food labels when using packaged foods: compare sodium in the foods and choose the foods with the lower numbers.
- Drink water rather than sugary drinks.
