Addition: a novel by Toni Jordan

"I loved this book so much that I wanted to keep holding it & reliving the pleasure of reading it! Grace has a obsessive-compulsive disorder (OCD) & needs to count everything, including how many bristles are on her toothbrush (1,768). When she meets a man in a grocery store & steals the banana from his basket, her reclusive life begins to turn upside down as she decides to combat her disorder. Sharp wit is abundant & you will cheer for these wonderful characters. This is as compelling to read as Grace's need to count, & I highly recommend it to all. Reading groups will have a heyday with this one!" – Susan Wasson, Bookworks, Albuquerque, NM

Angels and Demons by Dan Brown

Harvard Symbologist professor is taken to the Swiss research center – CERN to interpret a symbol burned into a noted researcher's chest. He fears the Illuminati have resurfaced after hundreds of years. He and the daughter of the researcher search Rome for a stolen capsule that can destroy the center of Christendom.

Having Our Say: the Delaney Sister First 100 Years by Sarah & Elizabeth Delaney

Sarah and A. Elizabeth Delany, better known as Sadie and Bessie, were the second and third of ten children born to a former slave father and a mixed-race mother. Sadie and Bessie first became teachers in order to raise money to further their education. They gravitated to Harlem to join older siblings, the Jazz Age elite, and a developing black intelligensia. Always working, always struggling the sisters chose careers over marriage. Following the footsteps of their father, who became the first African American to be elected bishop in the Episcopal Church, Sadie received a master's degree from Columbia University and became the first black woman to teach domestic science in the New York School system while Bessie became only the second black woman to become a licensed dentist in New York state. At the age of more than one hundred years each, Sadie and Bessie retell their life story with humor and conviction. Available at the Beaumont Public Library

Home Repair by Liz Rosenberg

Can lightning really strike twice? Just ask Eve, whose husband walks out on her in the middle of a garage sale. Now Eve is left to contend with 2 growing children, & an elderly, well-meaning & stubborn mother who rushes to “help.” Filled with equal measure of hilarity & heartbreak (including some “heartbreak diet” tips along the way). A poignant, lovely, funny, & ultimately uplifting story of love, family, & survival, Liz Rosenberg’s Home Repair is an unforgettable introduction to a lyrical, wise, & wonderfully vibrant new literary voice. Coming Soon to the Beaumont Public Library

The Lace Reader by Brunonia Barry

Can you read your future in a piece of lace? All of the Whitney women can. But the last time Towner read, it killed her sister and nearly robbed Towner of her own sanity. Vowing never to read lace again, her resolve is tested when faced with the mysterious, unsolvable disappearance of her beloved Great Aunt Eva, Salem's original Lace Reader. Told from opposing and often unreliable perspectives, the story engages the reader's own beliefs. Should we listen to Towner, who may be losing her mind for the second time? Or should we believe John Rafferty, a no nonsense New York detective, who ran away from the city to a simpler place only to find himself inextricably involved in a psychic tug of war with all three generations of Whitney women? Does either have the whole story? Or does the truth lie somewhere in the swirling pattern of the lace? Available at the Beaumont Public Library

Lovely Bones by Alice Sebold

The narrator of The Lovely Bones, Susie Salmon, is a normal fourteen year-old girl. She has just received her first kiss and is looking forward to going to high school next year. She is on her way home from school when she is stopped by a man who wants to show her something in the cornfield. Susie thinks she can trust this man because he is a neighbor who knows her parents. Unfortunately, this man, George Harvey, is a serial killer who rapes and murders Susie. Susie keeps an eye on her family and killer from heaven. In heaven, Susie meets and learns the stories of all of his victims. She sees Harvey hide her body, lie to her father and the police, and run from the crimes he has committed. Susie wants to help the living apprehend her killer, but can only watch as the police and her family try to gather evidence and find her murderer. Through the experiences of the Salmon family in The Lovely Bones, readers can examine their own feelings and reactions to loss and mourning. Can something good come from a horrible tragedy? Can healing come from a place of tremendous violence and despair?

Stones into Schools by Greg Mortenson

Stones into Schools describes Mortenson's continuing efforts to bring schools to remote arewas of Pakistan and Afghanistan. When a group of Kirghiz horsemen make the treacherous journey to Pakistan in 1999 to track down "Dr. Greg" and ask him to build a school in the far-flung and nearly inaccessible Wakhan Corridor of eastern Afghanistan, Mortenson agrees without realizing the ramifications. Over the next 10 years, he and the CAI's "Dirty Dozen"--twelve determined, dedicated men of different cultures, religions, and languages—got to know tribal leaders, negotiated with corrupt government officials, and swayed narrow-minded people to promote literacy and learning, especially among girls. Mortenson's CAI fervently believed that universal education was the Western world's best chance for quelling political instability and religious intolerance in the East. Before the decade ended, their efforts resulted in several schools--and even basic infrastructure.

The Story Sisters: a novel by Alice Hoffman

From the critically acclaimed author of the bestselling The Third Angel comes a storytelling masterpiece, the devastating & remarkable tale of 3 sisters who are lost & found, betrayed & rescued.
